POWER

THERE'S a touch of the eagle's wings to the car using Ethyl.

Ethyl is more than gasoline. It is good gasoline containing the Ethyl anti-knock compound developed by automotive research to create a better motor fuel.

Ethyl is required by the new high-compression engines if they are to deliver their full power. But any car runs better with Ethyl.

Try it this week-end when driving will be hardest. Ethyl Gasoline Corporation, Chrysler Building, New York City.

ETHYL GASOLINE

Wherever you see the Ethyl emblem, it means good gasoline of high anti-knock quality.

FRANCES DENNEY »

offers you her new

« HERBAL

PREPARATIONS

No longer need summer dull your loveliness — or leave its tell-tale marks on your skin. FRANCES DENNEY Herbal Preparations are designed to safeguard and improve your loveliness through every season of the year.

Herbal Texture Lotion: A thorough liquid cleanser—wonderful for that quick freshening-up in the morning and during the day. Also delightful for using after MISS DENNEY's Herbal Cleansing Cream. It removes oiliness but does not dry the skin. $1.50 and $2.50.

Herbal Oil Blend: Very dry skin—and skin exposed to wind and sun, respond gratefully to its soothing unguents. It is a deep-tissue builder—and is marvelous for worn and withered skin and for the face that is aging. $5.

Herbal Astringent Cream: A soft, fluffy cream with astringent qualities. A thin film on the skin protects against sun and wind, and serves as a splendid base for powder. $2.50.

All of MISS DENNEY's Herbal Preparations are created to supplement the numerous other preparations long distinguished by her name. They are available through selected stores in each city.

MISS DENNEY will be very happy to send you additional information regarding her Preparations and Treatments, if you will write to her in Philadelphia.

FINE HOSIERY

REG. APPLIED FOR

● To be seen this Summer with shiny legs is just as bad as being caught with a shiny nose. Dull is the smart description of a Smart leg. But Dullness has its nuances . . . avoid deadly flat, lifeless effects . . . Don't hang a Crepe on your Beautiful Calves. Select the Subtle Dull Patina found in Supretwist Stockings . . . There's nothing quite as suggestive . . . of chic . . . of knowing the right thing. Their impalpably fine Patina improves with each laundering . . . at least it seems to.

● Clearer . . . Sheerer . . . are other illusions about this bewitching stocking . . . You'd never believe they actually contain more silk by weight—one of the reasons they outwear any Silk Stockings you've ever adorned . . . (11.2% stronger fabric) . . . a godsend to a strained budget.

● This most perfect of all Stockings has yet another exclusive virtue (if virtue is exclusive) to be found in the Sheerest Chiffon Number (known in the Stores as 48) . . . Along the Seam and next to the Hem is an innocent looking little reinforcement that diffuses the Stress and Strain every time you stretch, run, sit, leap, dance or whatever you do that makes ordinary stockings break out where the Hem joins the Seam . . . Remember the dozens of pairs you have ruined . . . Well . . . you can't hurt these, even with the most arduous activity.

● This idea is our own little invention..the patent is applied for..it's called the "Loquet" . . . and you can only get it in Windsor Supretwist Stockings—but you can get them at the smarter Shops and Stores everywhere . . . Windsor Mills, Inc., 389 Fifth Avenue, New York; 2nd and Westmoreland Sts., Philadelphia.

Look for the

LOQUET

● The Windsor "Loquet" eliminates the prevalent fabric breaks at the most vulnerable part of a Chiffon Stocking—where the Seam joins the Hem. You can see the benefit of the Loquet at a glance.

THE GARDENER'S CONFIDANT

Whether you have a staff of twenty gardeners to tend your acres of beds, or a rock garden where you pull your own weeds, you will find in House & Garden's Second Book of Gardens a sympathetic friend and a useful one . . . an essentially practical assistant.

Perhaps we should have called it "The Compleat Gardener" . . . it has about it that deep and friendly understanding that distinguishes Izaak Walton's little intimate discourse from all other books on fishing.

● The Contributors are among the most distinguished in the world of gardening . . . the photographs are marvels of clarity in illustrating the points discussed in the text. There are over 600 pictures showing the finest gardens of Europe and America . . . town gardens, country gardens, formal gardens, wild gardens, rock gardens, water gardens, gardens by the sea, window-box gardens, green houses . . . garden gates, walls, fences, trellises, garden houses . . . tulips that are now so popular . . . narcissi that will come into their own in the fall with the release of the species that have been developed in Europe since the quarantine. Tells all about landscaping gardens . . . planting and care. Includes a directory of the leading landscape architects, flower schools, and flower societies.

Oh! . . . THERE ARE DOZENS OF WAYS TO REMIND HIM

MAYBE it's just one of those natural little lapses of husbandly memory . . .

Perhaps he still thinks that Schrafft's chocolates and candies can be bought only in the 38 Shattuck-owned Schrafft's stores in New York, Boston and Syracuse . . .

But in any event, if he has not yet brought home the visible proof that there's a Schrafft's dealer in your town — then we suggest that he be reminded.

These famous chocolates and candies are far too great a treat to miss!

P. S.—If this procedure fails—you may get Schrafft's for yourself in stores near you—wherever good candies are sold. And you'll find them surprisingly better than any candy you ever before tasted!

When it comes to Sanitary Lingerie

PARIS PREFERS KLEINERT'S

MANY a smart Parisienne whose frocks are created by a Grand Couturier of the Place Vendôme, wears under them protective lingerie styled by Kleinert's. Just as Kleinert's Dress Shields assure the protection of the underarm, so these dainty, well-shaped sanitary aprons and step-ins can be depended upon to keep your skirts free from wrinkles and safeguard even the sheerest fabrics in any emergency.

Well stocked Notion Counters—all over America and in most European capitals—can show you charming styles cut expressly for the new fitted fashions. Insist on Kleinert's sanitary lingerie.

Fashion's color card finds accurate reflection in Kleinert's Dress Shields — 32 shades with which to match your frocks!

Stop for a moment at our Paris headquarters, 30 rue Joubert — we always welcome visitors. All your favorite Kleinert's products may be purchased here as well as in the better Paris shops and stores.

COOL HOSIERY

NOW A FACT · NOT A FANCY

Stockings that feel as cool as an early Spring morning . . . even on hottest summer days.

Light as feathers. Sheer as mist. Clear as Lake Como.

Cling like powder—and as utterly devoid of shine.

Cool because made of crêpe chiffon—lighter than ordinary silk as silk is lighter than satin. Yet the closely coiled silk crêpe threads have the strength and elasticity that give amazingly long wear.

Cool summer colors. Powder tints for pastel costumes. Tropical tans for sun-kissed complexions.

A wealth of colors and styles to select from. Full fashioned or the Schiaparelli costume styles without back seam. $1.65, $1.95, $2.95 pair.

At smartest shops and department stores.

Summer Comfort Begins With Hosiery and Under- wear of Durene

Slip into a durene combination, a tweed skirt, and this good-looking durene mesh-weave overblouse, if you would have the clothes-assurance that lets you concentrate on the game. The blouse has raglan shoulders, slenderizing V seams, and cool smart white glass buttons.

LOVELY, lustrous durene—fine and smooth and soft—touching the skin as lightly as the breath of a summer zephyr—durene hosiery and underwear offer smartness with comfort, all through the long summer days.

Perhaps you've already worn durene, without knowing it by name... The name durene simply identifies the finest specially-processed cottons it is possible to produce, and the hosiery and underwear into which they are knit... Be sure to ask for silk stockings with feet and tops of durene, for durene is wonderfully absorbent, comfortable, and long-wearing, and the durene tops prevent destructive garter runs.

Most good stores are also showing durene underthings designed both for day and evening — abbreviated sports types with sun-tan backs, clinging combinations, brassieres, vests, shorts, and overblouses in fresh, lovely tones like baby pink, aquamarine blue, maize, and eggshell. The stores also have men's durene socks, golf stockings, unionsuits, pullover and polo shirts; and children's socks, stockings, underwear, beach and play suits. Ask to see them.

Durene Association of America
250 Fifth Avenue, New York City

A boy feels really well-dressed in this smart tailored play suit. It withstands hard wear without harm to the strong, firm, lustrous durene yarn from which it is knit.

A durene mesh-weave ensemble in pale rose—a three-piece play-suit that launders beautifully, and looks like new every time she wears it.

Shorts and brassiere of durene mesh-weave are softly lustrous, cling closely to the figure, and give you complete freedom of movement. And silk stockings with durene feet and tops wear many times longer.

Be safe... remove cold cream the Kleenex way

The cream your skin needs is absorbed in 5 to 10 minutes' massage
... the rest should be removed with this safe, absorbent Kleenex

LOVELY HELEN WRIGHT

Universal's talented new leading lady, has her own feminine reasons for removing cosmetics the Kleenex way. She exclaims: "Such lovely tints! Kleenex not only removes make-up and cleansing cream very thoroughly—it puts me in the right mood for a beauty treatment."

Helen Wright

BE SAFE when you remove cold cream. Don't use a method that may stretch and relax the skin... like coarse, unabsorbent towels. Don't use unhygienic "cold cream cloths," which usually carry bacteria into the pores instead of lifting impurities away.

Kleenex is safe. Great skin authorities recommend it, great beauties use it. Every Kleenex tissue comes from the box pure, soft, absolutely free from the germs that are so disastrous to beauty.

And Kleenex is so very absorbent. The delicate tissues simply blot up the surplus cream, along with lingering bits of dirt and cosmetics. No rubbing is needed.

Better than handkerchiefs

Kleenex tissues are becoming more and more popular for handkerchiefs. They are so fresh, clean and soft... and do away with unpleasant handkerchief laundering.

Doctors recommend Kleenex when there's a cold, to avoid reinfection. Think how much better it is to use a tissue, then discard it, than to carry germ-filled, damp handkerchiefs about with you.

Drug and department stores carry Kleenex. Ask for it anywhere.

CUISINE FOR SMART NEW YORK'S SUMMER

Smart New Yorkers throng the Roof not only because it is cool haven for their summer-night gaities . . . not only because of the flow of Lopez dance rhythms in Urban's sapphire-silver bower . . . but, also, because of St. Regis cuisine . . . in sympathy with smart New York's summer palate, for quiet luncheon, gay dinner, carnival supper. Likewise is the slip-covered seclusion of new St. Regis suites and rooms in sympathy with preferences of the city's smartest summer visitors. Transient rooms . . . suites on St. Regis summer lease.

THROUGH CHANGELESS INDIA IN "STOP-OVER SUITES"

TODAY, express trains (many electrified) in de luxe comfort take you to the heart of India's antiquities. Served by trained Indian domestics, in your own apartment pullmans . . . salon-bedroom-bath-and-kitchens on wheels, your home for stop-overs. Also fine European hotels. Such travel luxury unveils for you the rose-pink walls of Jaipur . . . the legendary Taj Mahal . . . prayer-wheels, devil dancers, Sanskrit plays . . . the sandalwood funeral pyres of golden Benares. Comfort takes you to Vijayanagar's archaic monoliths, or mediaeval Udaipur, to Lahore the home of Ranjit Singh, Lion of the Punjab, and the awesome Khyber Pass, unchanged since Alexander led his legions through. Regular weekly steamers. And 7-day rail-air route from Paris. Booklets, complete tour service by India State Railways, Delhi House, 38 East 57th Street, New York. Or, consult the better travel agents. Freight inquiry also solicited.

ERASE THOSE WORRY-WRINKLES

A complicated vacation of rigorous schedules is no vacation. Why not spend a truly leisurely summer this year somewhere in New England?

You might try Cape Cod. Dive at night into an obsidian sea . . . let the phosphorescence clothe you like a Molyneux beaded gown. Prowl through the old-world streets of Provincetown. Watch the fishing fleet go out at dawn. Sail to sand-duned Nantucket . . . sun yourself on the ragged cliffs beside the NEXT STOP, PORTUGAL sign.

Or the coast of Maine and its myriad islands. Here are your favorite sports—golf, tennis, fishing, riding, swimming, flying. Sleep in the full sweep of pine-fragranced breezes . . . picnic on unexplored islands . . . dance under a festival of flying stars.

Perhaps the mountains are calling? Then how about New Hampshire? From the peaks of the White Mountains you can see the ocean . . . from the depths of the valleys you will gain great peace. Robert Frost says it is "restful just to think about New Hampshire."

Let these pages help you to make this summer the most peaceful of your life. Write to some of the hotels listed . . . make reservations . . . and let the scenery and soothing air of New England do the rest.

The charm and personality of this World Cruise ship...

Charm and personality belong not only to enchanting people... a ship can possess them too... the Franconia does!... The inherent ability to please, to amuse, to fall in line with your every wish, be it a desire for the sophisticated pleasures of a luxurious club, or the health giving exercises of a perfect gymnasium and swimming pool.

The Franconia affords the most modern... the Utopian opportunity to sail the seven seas... to see the world. Yield to her lure... find new horizons... explore the secret, rose-coloured city of Petra... at Singapore cross over to Johore... see how a native prince lives in a gorgeous palace in Eastern splendor... treat yourself to some rare treasure in the Pettah at Colombo... thrill to gorgeous Bali... look over the Son of Heaven's fairy palace at Peking.

The Franconia sails Eastward on January 10—returns May 28... again two world-famous leaders of travel join their 179 years of experience, achievement and tradition.

Also Westward Around the World in the Samaria sailing from New York Dec. 3

Circle the Pacific on the lovely MALOLO

. . . a luxurious cruise to 19 strange ports

Just to mention these places brings a thrill of adventure! Nikko and Kyoto in beautiful Japan. Peiping, Shanghai, Hongkong in the Celestial Kingdom. Bangkok in quaint Siam. The wicked city of Singapore in Malaya.

You've longed to see them. Then, go this year on the Malolo's second Around Pacific Cruise! You'll see all these—and many more. Batavia in the East Indies. Macassar in Celebes. The fine cities of Australia and New Zealand. Romantic Fiji, Samoa, Hawaii.

Nineteen ports in 12 countries will be visited by the 23,000-ton Malolo, speed queen of the Pacific, famed for spacious luxury. You sail September 20 from San Francisco to reach the orchid lands "down under" the equator just when exquisite Spring touches them with glory. You return December 19, bringing home rare Christmas gifts.

Only this one cruise offers so much that is new and fascinating! Fares $1,500 to $6,500, shore excursions included. Membership is limited. Ask the Matson Line or American Express Co., jointly conducting this unusual tour, or your travel agency.

for travelling —*

WOMEN who are accomplished in the fine art of comfortable travel have long known and appreciated the inconspicuous convenience of Curads. No larger than a jar of cold cream, a compact roll of six large pads, Curads occupy only three inches of space in your traveling bag. The product of one of the largest manufacturers of surgical dressings, Curads have now been even further refined in quality. They are made of hospital gauze filled with a soft, white cotton of superior fineness and great absorbency. Their superior comfort, their convenient compactness, is welcomed alike by the matron, the college girl, the business woman . . . by house guests. If your leading store does not carry them, send 40 cents to the Lewis Manufacturing Co., Division of the Kendall Company, Walpole, Mass., for a full-size roll in a plain wrapper.

AUTUMN FASHIONS COME TO A WAITING WORLD

Vogue prophesies the mode—authoritatively—painting the Autumn Fashion picture as presented by the French couturiers. Vogue has toured Paris for you to bring you the exciting news of the new styles. The outline of forecast points shown in the accompanying column is only a part of the wealth of Fashion information which makes the Autumn Forecast Number of Vogue invaluable to the woman who looks into the future and plans her wardrobe advisedly and correctly.

OUTSTANDING FORECAST POINTS

ELEGANCE, expressed by rich fabrics; dark colours for day, jewel like colours for evening; new use of encrusted furs.

COAT-DRESSES, coats, and winter dressmaker suits increase in importance.

PROPORTIONS practically the same, slight changes in skirt lengths, skirts imperceptibly longer for daytime, definitely clearing the floor for evening.

Wherever the long trail leads

THROUGH heavy city traffic—across fertile valleys and desert sands—to the top of snow-capped mountains—wherever the long trail leads—you will find the Ford car and cheery words about it.

Its flashing beauty gives it distinction at the Country Club, yet it is no stranger to deeply rutted roads and hard daily usage in the far-off places. Its sturdy strength, reliability and capable performance, at all times and under all conditions, reflect the care and enduring quality that have been built into it.

By its constant, faithful service through many months and years you will know that it is a "value far above the price."

Putnam Hall

After Prep-School

Suppose your daughter isn't ready yet to take her place in the business or artistic or social world . . . suppose she wants to continue her studies, but that leap to college seems frighteningly wide, or four years seem too long . . .

Suppose—why not?—she takes a two-year Junior College course.

Junior Colleges fill many of the needs that the larger colleges often overlook. They offer the individual attention of private school classes in courses of college standing . . . their academic standards permit transference into the junior class of the finest colleges . . . the pupil may choose a purely cultural, or a business, or a home-making curriculum, if straight academics are not desired. If the young girl's schooling is to end here, she has received an unusually well-rounded education.

Why not look into some of these excellent schools? They may immediately answer the problem of your daughter's education. Write to them, or write to us . . . we may be able to assist you in finding the school best suited to your daughter's needs.

BEAUTIFUL AMENTDALE SEAT OF NATIONAL PARK SEMINARY

JAMES E. AMENT, A.M., Ph.D., LL.D., President

Do you want a school for your daughter, which in addition to maintaining a high scholastic standard, gives careful supervision to each student as an individual? A school substantially organized with the traditional, social charm of the old South?

Are you interested in a school that gives your daughter a thorough academic training supplemented by a practical experience in many lines?

Are you seeking a school that encourages all that is fine and beautiful in the new freedom of modern life, yet one that is old-fashioned in its ideals of womanhood? A school where your daughter may enjoy a city's educational and social advantages, while protected from its numerous distractions and where she will have the same security, care, and comfort as in her own home?

National Park Seminary fulfills all of these requirements. It is prepared to give your daughter all the benefits of an enriched educational program. The teachers are selected for their ability and enthusiastic interest in their particular subjects as well as their understanding of the modern girl and her needs.

National Park Seminary offers a two-year Junior College course, with special courses in Art, Music, Home Economics, Drawing, Expression, Secretarial work and groundwork in Aviation, as well as a four-year College Preparatory course.

There are thirty-two completely equipped, beautifully furnished buildings, which include eight sorority houses. Every girl is a member of a sorority club.

There are over three hundred acres of beautiful campus. Miles of bridle paths through the woods and a picturesque canoeing course. Carefully directed sports bring health and pleasure. There are athletics for every girl. The farm and dairy provide fresh, wholesome food for all seasons. Washington with its cultural advantages is within convenient reach.

If you are interested, a catalog will be sent you on request. Address:

The Condé Nast Educational Bureau recommends schools, not from hearsay, but from personal knowledge. Experienced members of our school staff visit the schools advertising in Vogue, Vanity Fair, and House & Garden, and make confidential reports on them for our school files.

That is why we are able to make conscientious and intelligent recommendations when our readers ask us "What school is best for my child?"

EMILY POST, famous author of "Etiquette, the Blue Book of Social Usage," answers all these questions for you in her new booklet "Bridal Silver and Wedding Customs."

Read all the helpful advice Mrs. Post gives in her friendly, charming style, about wedding customs and choosing your bridal silver. Look at all the lovely Sterling patterns shown in the booklet. See which one seems to express your own taste and personality.

Then ask your jeweler to show you the flat pieces for one cover in this chosen pattern. Ask, too, to see all the serving pieces—the inexpensive relish dishes, the serving dishes, and the magnificent tea and coffee services. Then you will be able to picture your own table—an ensemble made lovely and harmonious because the silver is of one pattern throughout.

PERFORMANCE claims that would ordinarily seem exaggerated are perfectly in order with Chrysler—the farthest advance thus far achieved in motor car engineering. — That the great line of cars bearing this name is farther ahead in engineering can be demonstrated easily to anyone who is familiar with the science of engineering—and equally well demonstrated to the motorist who judges engineering entirely by performance results. — And how these Chryslers do perform! — How powerful and brisk and full of life! How easily they dart through traffic or sprint up the steepest hills! — How smoothly and quietly they maintain high speeds on the open highway! How responsive they are to the slightest touch on the wheel! How instantly obedient to their internal weatherproof hydraulic brakes! — There is no other motor car performance like Chrysler performance—because there is no other motor car engineering like Chrysler engineering.

VOGUE'S EYE VIEW OF THE MODE

Ladies on occasions will do anything for style. Style, this summer, is doing everything for the ladies. The mode is making us deliciously comfortable and free.

Tennis frocks are as like as rackets, and one golf dress differs from another merely as a brassy does from a mashie, but they all fit taut above the hip-bone and make us feel lithe and good at the game. Sports hats exist only when supremely unirksome. Young girls are pulling off their hats in smart restaurants in town if they feel a trifle warm. Even crocheted berets are likely to be ripped off anywhere and at any time with delightful unconcern.

Corsets are very nearly as comfortable as your skin. Lingerie has been reduced to an exquisite absurdity. The slip is replaced very often by the cooler petticoat.

The last bit of nautical millinery has been cleared from the decks. The smartest bathing-suit of the year is a hand-knit swimming suit. Our sense of modesty has obligingly changed in favour of comfort. You can be a grande dame with the sun beating down on three-fourths of your body.

There is a cult for health in the summer sun-baked air. Neurotic complexes that were so fashionable a season or two ago are as antiquated now as migraines or vapours. Limberness is coveted. The young are flipping handsprings and standing on their heads with graceful ease. A new type is evolving. It is not Greek, nor can we patent it as exclusively American. The goddess of to-day dives into the Gulf of Finland, into the blue Adriatic, the Channel, the Pacific, or the ocean at Newport with equal grace. She is not athletic in the old basket-ball-and-middy sense of the word, but classically lithe. The more sophisticated she is, the more natural. She is no longer burned carelessly black, but, as by a master chef, she is rolled in sand with a little oil, baked evenly on all sides, and done to a turn.

MRS. EDGAR W. LEONARD

TO-NIGHT

WHEN dusk falls like crumpled black tulle over the city and the belated evening breeze begins to stir, women in penthouses and men in sky-scraper offices, débutantes stranded in apartments overlooking the East River, and young gentlemen sated with bond selling, raise, like a jazz anthem, the question, "Where shall we go to-night?"

Shall we be quite grand and wear the white crêpe and the round turquoises to sophisticated surroundings and dance to a tail-coated orchestra? Shall we be a little less swell and wear the beloved mauve chiffon to a cool, quiet place with dreamy waltz music and dim corner tables? Shall we dress hurriedly in thin black and a crystal necklace and go the rounds of two or three amusing little places with curious settings and diverting entertainment? Or shall we keep on the printed afternoon dress and the shiny straw beret and motor to a roadhouse through the delicate night-air of the country or take a Battery boat to Coney Island?

Perhaps, it is the white crêpe in which one emerges on the streets of a pleasure-bent city. One dines at the Persian roof-garden of the Ritz, where the walls are painted to seem a delectable Persian paradise, into which one almost could walk. Theodor stands at the door, a benign and charming genius of the place. Between delicious brook-trout and alligator-pear salad, one dances to a very paragon of orchestras, inspiring, yet miraculously soft, with an alluring drummer who weaves a tangle of syncopated tempo. Back at one's table, one sips water from the dark blue glass goblets that are a trademark of all the Ritzes; one whispers an invitation to tea next day to an acquaintance at a neighbouring table; only too soon is it found to be half-past ten, and one calls regretfully for the check; to the unconcealed joy of one's Best Beloved, it is discovered that there is no cover charge.

On, then (and all New York is crying On! at the same time) to the roof of the Saint Regis, decorated with delightful fantasy by Josef Urban. The leafy ceiling, the flowery walls, the whimsical peacocks adorning the columns with characteristic vanity, give one the sense of being in the branches of a high tree. Friends on every side, the superb Lopez orchestra, and the curious and pleasant mixed lighting produce an atmosphere that is reminiscent both of the Florida, in Paris, minus the snowballs, and an indoor swimming pool. One can not bear to stop dancing to this inspired music; one claps, every one claps, and the sound is like glass breaking; all at once the orchestra encores, and one is charmed to hear last year's pet tune, bringing back old parties, old ball gowns, this beau and that. The waiter, in a white pea-jacket, like the stewards on an English ship, brings White Rock and caviar sandwiches; red and green lights go on in the ceiling, strangely reminiscent of the stop-and-go signs on Park Avenue, and Veloz and Yolanda dance an excellent tango, while a table of bright young things concentrate with intensity on the simpler steps. This goes on.

Reluctantly, one recognizes a certain need for sleep, observes with horror the time, and starts for home, pausing to view from the balcony one of the most glorious city views in the world; a metropolis spread out before one's eyes, marked by a million, million lights that sparkle like diamonds under water.

Or, perhaps, one doesn't do any of this, but has set one's heart on the Casino, in Central Park. It is amusing to toy with the idea of dining in the country. This place is a reincarnation of the pastoral playthings that were so diverting in the days of Louis Seize. Ladies in lemon coloured lace are charmed at feeling sophisticatedly bucolic. There are little red flowers for lights; the circular veranda where one may dine is painted crimson, and one stares out into a black night, broken only by faces of restive taxi drivers peering in. The cold madrilène is like a cupful of transparent rubies. A summer breeze wanders through the open casement. "Can't I get some water?" cries a plaintive blonde in raspberry-pink.

Search-lights from the city stray through the dark air. Waiters with jackets that bear vast silver buttons serve the diner with food cooked under the supervision of Beaumont, former chef to the Baron Alfred de Rothschild and the son of the chef to Victoria, Queen of England and Empress of India. The little coffee-cups are black as the night.

To famous music, led by the stormy-haired Mr. Reisman, one may dance on a crowded floor, peopled with well-born brunettes and blondes of humbler origin. Or, one may wander into an emptier room, the walls of which are painted with great trees blossoming with roses and dance to whispering music on a black floor, which is pleasing to the young and the romantic. Then back to the little oval-backed gold chairs until it is time to say "Taxi" to the doorman and drive drowsily homeward through a midnight park.

But, suppose one has worn the dear old mauve chiffon, the flowered scarf, the ancient amethyst earrings. Where shall we go, to-night?

First, let us try the Trocadero. There is a man here, called "The Count," who plays the guitar and is known to all of us whose foible is orchestra men. His hair is the blondest in the world and practically matches the white piano behind him.

Above you, great lights, like infernal stars, burn sulkily, but then, paradoxically, the walls are gilded like Heaven. You may sit at a table with a white cloth, or you may choose a red-checked table-cloth in a room half-shut away.

The atmosphere is one of "Let me tell you the story of my life." One feels sympathetic and vaguely romantic, while the delicate music hints of Viennese nights and what sorrow it is to be misunderstood. There is no dance floor; one stares, rapt, at the drowsy orchestra and talks and talks.

But it grows later; we must dance, but not lose this lovely dreamy trance that comes from a certain kind of music, a certain kind of place. So we taxi rapidly to the Montmartre, the ancient, the beloved scene of one's first romance. The place has been redecorated, in a satisfying dark blue with silver leaves, but the spirit of the place will never be redecorated, it will always inspire such remarks as, "How lovely you are to-night."

Charles Journal, like a benevolent genie, towers over one's table and sighs for the days when Reggie Vanderbilt sat here and George Widener there, when Maurice was dancing, and we were all of us children. Montmartre is full of the ghosts of people who have loved the place and of live people being sentimental in corners.

As one dances, lights change the ceiling to a heavenly silver-blue; we dance, looking up at it with the divine happiness that comes of dancing to wonderful music. After a while, the orchestra plays very old tunes, like "Some of These Days" and the old Berlin melodies. One goes back to the table. "Once upon a time, I was very much in love" begins one's beau.

So much for romance and sentimentality; so much for soft music. Perhaps, at the close of the hot day, one is bored—plain bored. One wants bright lights, and amusement, funny people around one, original entertainment.

The Russian Kretchma is on East Fourteenth Street. One tries to decide whether the menu is written from the point of view of francs or cents—"Russian Fresh Caviar, Black, $3.00."

"Russian Caviar, Black, Fresh, $2.00." What's in a name? It is all very intriguing, and the waiters, as Russian as can be, are all good-looking.

The walls are adorned with pictures of a Russian conception of an idyllic love-nest and with agreeably depressed-looking peasants, out of Chekhov, looking out of the windows, all drawn with "knowing deformation." Meanwhile, representatives of fair Harvard sit shoulder to shoulder with graduates of the University of Moscow, a débutante pursues the consonantal bill of fare, and an eminent New York dramatic critic is to be seen eating a great deal of blinis, which is pancakes with red caviar and sour cream.

The entertainment really entertains. There is an excellent violinist, a woman who is a sort of Russian Sophie Tucker, an accordionist who is handsome beyond words, and the most enormous man in the world with the most enormous voice and the most enormous charm singing Russian songs.

Next, one pays a call to the Hollywood Restaurant. This is typical Broadway at its best and very, very noisy and cheerful. One's best friend is there. But so is the girl in the Scandals. Senator Brookhart would feel far from home. (Continued on page 88)

THE tip of a taut spring-board is no place to be eccentric about clothes. You can't flip into a jack-knife dive or stroke smoothly out into the deep with useless flares that act as water-logged handicaps. The smart thing in aquatics is the comfortable thing, and so, on the smartest beaches of the world this year, little else but one-or-two-piece wool jersey swimming suits are seen. Generally speaking, there are but three types to choose from. If you have an exceptionally good figure, by all means wear the skirtless, one-piece, maillot type of suit with a belt at your waist. Equally smart is the knit suit with the trunks attached under an overlapping flap—very much like a man's suit. The third—and probably the greatest favourite—is the type with separate trunks that pull over a step-in top, which may be either (Continued on page 94)

THE HAND-KNIT SUIT

SWIMS INTO FASHION

COLOURFUL CHARACTERS OF HOLLYWOOD

BY CECIL BEATON

EARLY to bed and early to rise—every one in Hollywood has to toe the line. You must wake at seven-thirty sharp to be ready “made-up” upon the lot by nine o’clock, even though you may not be called upon until the afternoon. There is no knowing: you may be needed, and you must be ready near-by; you must learn patience, or you will go mad. Even if you are a Clara Bow, you will have to wait. The machines have to be tested; the lights have to be fixed; the sound gadgets put in order; one light may be fizzing and spoiling the scene. They may have to take that shot over again ten or twelve times. The heat in the studio becomes fetid—it would be so easy to lose your temper, and so useless.

All the stars are charming to the charming assistants, to the technical staff, the electricians, sound-recorders, and camera man. They have to be, for even though Norma Shearer may be married to the boss, the technician, if need be, could “take it out of her” by putting on an unbecoming light or turning a screw to make her voice sound shrill. Every one in the studio sighs with relief when a scene has at last been successfully shot. The property-man rolls his gum to the side of the mouth and asks, “Well, and how is Gloria bearing up to-day?” And the Marquise’s teeth are exposed in the well-known smile.

They work hard in Hollywood. Their hours are long; they often work at night and on Sundays, too, and even if most of the time is spent waiting, there is no harder work than hanging around. Stars who are upon the crest of the wave have precious little interval between films. They are not even given time to characterize a part and are kept in ignorance until the last moment. “Do you know what they are going to give me to do next, Elsie?” (Miss Janis is an impresario now.) But it is a secret, and the script is only shown a day before rehearsals. Some studios have become such competent factories that they can turn out a talkie in ten days; others bungle and sink a million dollars before they use a scene.

For big stars and little, there is comparatively little social life in Hollywood. There are a few private parties for those who like them, and it is never necessary for men to dress, though the ladies flaunt their taste with a great display of their own individuality. Ina Claire is a Dresden shepherdess one night and a pyjamaed houri the next. Lilyan Tashman, a Grecian goddess with golden ringlets and the world’s best figure, is always “Vogue,” and Lupe Velez is driven to a frenzy of jealousy by her chinchilla cape and long evening gloves. Bebe Daniels, with lips like prunes, wears diamonds, but no back to her dress. Jetta Goudal’s bun is looped like a cart-horse’s tail.

Parties begin very elegantly, but often end with a brawl, bad language, a broken screen, and a black eye. There may be a wedding, with the church decorated with pink tulle bows, and there is always a fantastic, assorted crowd in the Blossom Room of the Roosevelt Hotel; but, although Saturday night is the only night when there is no fear of an early call in the morning, it is the night when the Embassy Club chooses not to open its doors.

To those who are content with the physical joys, life here is perfection. There is the pouring sun, the luscious avocado-pears, the fabulous swimming pools in the comfortable beach houses; every one has excellent tennis-courts and rides on horseback in clothes of the most imaginative variety. There are magnificent week-end parties given at a glorious ranch near-by, and here Miss Marion Davies shows herself to be the Host and Toast of the World.

Of the personalities, Greta Garbo is the most glamorous and interest-inspiring, for she is neither seen nor heard. She is shy and highly strung and will not meet people. They upset, bore, terrify, and exhaust her. She has been very unhappy and now is on the defensive and does everything possible to balk the intrusion of strangers. Her press managers are in despair: she will never be interviewed and only by a miracle can she be induced to come out of her hiding to be photographed.

The tales that are told of Greta Garbo torment one with excitement—she is intelligent, funny, and she reads a lot, they say. She is witty, she laughs at every one in Hollywood, though she appreciates her triumph, is grateful for it, and gets a great “kick” out of it. “Oh, Garbo is feeling badly to-day, and she is going home,” and home she goes, and no one dares order her back. It was only a few years ago that she arrived in Hollywood with two dresses, two hats, one set of underclothes, and no friends. She still has no friends, but a million fans are ready to die for her; men telephone her on long distance in the hope of hearing her voice; women send her orchids.

Lubitsch, the brilliant little director of Maurice Chevalier in “The Love Parade” and some of the best films that have come out of Hollywood, is another interesting, unusual, and almost equally independent personality. Exciting to watch at work, like an old blackbird, he moves in quick darts and starts; his bright eyes sparkle as though he had just seen the largest worm. He is witty, treats the whole business as though it were a great joke, but there is no one more punctilious and meticulous.

The immaculate Norma Shearer has made herself the very important figure she is by sheer hard work and dogged precision. Admittedly, her beauty is a very great asset—her skin and chiselled nose, the crown of her head and silken hair, her flower-stalk thin neck are perfection; yet, she lacks romance and glamour. But she atones and holds her position by her complete scrupulousness and perseverance. Her maid is always by her side with mirror, and comb, brilliantine and puff. No other star knows so much about her own appearance as she—she knows to the minutest detail how, when, and where she is looking

- As an inimitable chanteur, Maurice Chevalier has won the heart of New York and Paris and is fast becoming the idol of the sound pictures. “The Big Pond” won great praise, and his next picture, “The Little Café,” promises even greater acclaim
- The Irving Berlins have returned to New York, after a year in California. Mr. Berlin has completed the score for a new picture, “Love in a Cottage,” and he is now working on the score for the new Music Box Revue. Mrs. Berlin was Miss Ellen Mackay her best. She is a success in the talkies in spite of her metallic voice, on account of her sharpness and smartness, and it is significant of her that, whereas after a time most stars become slack and bored about the photographs taken of them, Miss Shearer still insists on approving every picture of herself before it is circulated.

Marion Davies, besides being a delicately freckled Greuze, is a superb mimic, and Cheiro, the miraculous palmist and numerologist, who has been reading, to the tune of many hundreds of dollars, the hands of all the stars, claims that Marion Davies, Mary Pickford, the maternal Gloria Swanson, and the exquisitely flower-like Lillian Gish, possess the most interesting hands and character in the city. In the majority of the others, he complains of a similarity of mentality, but few can resist conforming to Hollywood's type!

But this is no longer a period of great stars. With the advent of talking pictures, many of the old favourites have fallen, or are in the process of pulling a flop, and a legion of newcomers has appeared upon the sound sheet. The latest films are advertised for themselves rather than for the players. The lead in "All Quiet on the Western Front" has been given to a hitherto unknown actor. Swarms of Nancy Carrolls and Alice Whites and Mary Brians have appeared. Jake Oakie is one of the proverbial exceptions and will become a great name with his infectious smile and fresh screen personality. Gary Cooper, a caged lion away from his ranch, will remain a star; Colleen Moore will continue to receive a salary of twelve thousand dollars a week; and the fact that Buster Keaton no longer can remain silent, but must talk to preserve his fame, does not perturb him in the least.

OUR craving for activity is a complicated desire and difficult to explain, even by those who are under its spell. It seems to be some fundamental instinct, implanted in the world when the stars were set spinning through space, which has developed with astonishing vigour in our own day.

There are those, of course, who are active from necessity, but it is not of them I want to speak, nor of those who are moved by a fruitless agitation. Really active people have always a minute to spare. Those who experience the real joy of activity are impelled by a natural impulse, from which they can not escape. In giving themselves up to this impulse, they are carried on from one interest, one occupation, to another and gain in contentment, in health, and in the satisfaction that comes from taking part in the game of life; not merely watching it from the side-lines. Gradually, they learn to sort out and arrange their varied interests, so that they can draw upon them when needed. Thus, they experience something of the power and control that come to the conductor of a great orchestra.

Life, in its final analysis, is activity, and the more we are active, the more we might be said to be alive. And so we take to sports, in which we find an answer to this elemental impulse and need. Who of you has not experienced the exhilaration that comes with the sing of a golf-ball; the rhythm of a horse's gallop; the stimulation of the brisk homeward walk at dusk? Losing ourselves in a thrill of motion, we are swung into harmony with the universe and sense the profound, simple joy that comes with physical exertion.

THE JOY OF ACTIVITY

JEAN DE VOGÜÉ

THE CHARM OF IDLENESS

BY THE COMTESSE

JEAN DE NEUFBOURG

ONE of my friends, who usually lives in Africa, happened to bring to Paris a young Arab who had never left his own country. On their arrival, he left the new traveller in a hotel and went out on his own affairs. When he came back, he found the young foreigner leaning on the balcony, watching with intense interest the crowd in the street; he had not moved from his post all day. "But what are all these people after, and where are they running like that?" cried the Arab. "Why all these occupations? Why not breathe gently and enjoy, while doing nothing, the passing hour?"

How many joys do they not sacrifice, inevitably, all those who occupy themselves with so many things? Striving for a single end, concentrating all their faculties on the growth of their energies, they lose themselves in perpetual motion.

Innumerable, on the contrary, are the joys that are open to those who do nothing at all. They cultivate themselves, as one cultivates a beautiful garden, in which a thousand by-paths awaken curiosity; they have the leisure to develop their understanding, to sharpen their sensibilities to fine points—like marvellously responsive antennæ; they think, they dream, they meditate. In the shadow of their drooping lashes, they see new worlds; they are poets and mystics.

In doing nothing, you capture liberty and obey only your own fancy; the hour does not drive you—hurriedly, brutally, holding you in long bondage—, but is your servant and flows gently—malleable, pleasant, diverse. You are not a mere cog in the enormous, complex, incomprehensible machine of human work, but you live—independent and free.

THE FRANK CROWNINSHIELD COLLECTION

BY HELEN APPLETON READ

AN assumption that was maintained in the first of this series of articles on American collections, to the effect that a collector's works of art invariably reveal their owner's character, is again substantiated in the collection of Frank Crowninshield.

Mr. Crowninshield has been the Editor of Vanity Fair for the past fifteen years. In its pages he has maintained a policy of sophisticated informedness about intellectual and aesthetic affairs that has been a reflection of his own inquiring, seeking attitude toward life. This attitude, it would seem, has been a little like Walter Pater's when he said: "What we have to do is to be forever curiously testing new opinions and courting new impressions; never acquiescing in facile orthodoxy . . . While all melts under our feet, we may well catch any exquisite passion or any contribution to knowledge that seems, by a lifted horizon, to set the spirit free for a moment; or any stirring of the senses, strange dyes, strange colours and curious odours, or work of the artist's hands"—a quotation that might serve admirably as a motto to all potential collectors of modern art.

Mr. Crowninshield's ability to sense the psychological moment when new ideas and new forms in art are emerging from unpopular radicalism, because they are unfamiliar, to recognizable and so acceptable expressions of the spirit of the age, is a species of clairvoyance that has proved an important asset in assembling his collection, which is made up, for the most part, of contemporary French paintings, bronzes, water-colours, and drawings.

The collection, though it is little more than four years old, is regarded as one of the outstanding groups of contemporary French art in this country. He may be said, however, to have been preparing for it by creating the background and collecting the personalities that comprise it during the years of his editorship. Old numbers of Vanity Fair testify to this. It is surprising to find how many of the artists, who are now household words and "best sellers" in contemporary art, had their horizon of appeal extended through his sponsorship. Not only was he among the first to appreciate their quality, but he also helped, by his writings and editorial cooperation, to make their reputations in this country. His interest in new movements in art was an important factor in breaking down the provincialism of American aesthetic opinion. He was one of the organizers, and the first Secretary, of the Museum of Modern Art, which has recently proved a very successful artistic enterprise in New York.

Emelle Danielson

SOME OF MR. CROWNINSHIELD'S BRONZES AND BOOKS ON MODERN ART

The works of Picasso, Matisse, Derain, Brancusi, Marie Laurencin, and other French masters appeared in Vanity Fair when, even in France, all but the liberals were still regarding the "modernist" painters as something a little like wild beasts. Similarly, such Americans as Rockwell Kent, Edward Hopper, John Carroll, George Bellows, and Eugene Speicher appeared in its pages when these masters were as yet but little known. Kolbe, Lehmbruck, Pascin, and Mestrovic were introduced by him at a time when to admit the existence of significant talent beyond the Rhine was as much an exhibition of audacious internationalism as it was evidence of good connoisseurship. And, to bring the instances down to more recent displays of vanguardism—if such a phrase is permissible—we may cite his championship of, and writings on, the Mexican renaissance (Covarrubias, Orozco, Jean Charlot, and Diego Rivera) as well as his presentation of the ill-starred Modigliani, the accomplished and suave Segonzac, and the classically remote Despiau. He helped enormously in introducing these men to American art lovers, who, for all their increasing awareness of European favorites, had been curiously insensitive to the rare and personal qualities of these masters. POLKA DOTS

The pale grey-beige colour of this chenille-dotted net dress is a cool, tranquil note for summer evenings. Bands of soft taffeta, tied in front, give firmness, and shoulder bows are interesting

Augustabernard uses navy-blue crêpe elizabeth with the new heavy lace to match for this dinner-dress. The bertha-like cape is separate from the dress and matches the lace at the hem of the skirt

The informal evening dress shown at the right below is of flowered chiffon in soft tones of rose, blue, and green. The edges of the separate cape, shaped peplum, and hem are all unevenly scalloped

A compromise between a coat and a cape is effected by this cape-wrap of peach coloured chiffon velvet. A cape forms the sleeves, and the scarf collar and the soft flare at the hips are excellent points

This simple hip-length cape of pink moire has a softly draped shawl collar in front that ties in a bow falling low in the back. It is equally smart wrapped at the hips or hanging free from the shoulders

For noontime walks on the esplanade at Deauville, nothing could be better than Yteb's sleeveless, double-breasted white wool shantung dress. A navy-blue flannel jacket, white Panama hat, and brown-and-white shoes are appropriate

A beige-and-brown tweed is used for Goupy's "Sportif," a light-weight, but warm travelling outfit. The dress has a sleeveless white linen guimpe, buttoned like a vest. The hat is of beige fabric; the shoes and bag, brown leather

- Lucien Lelong carries out in "Message" a graceful summer ensemble in refreshing red-and-white printed crêpe. The wrap-around coat is tied at the waist-line by a belt, and the knotted scarf collar, which comes from the sleeveless dress underneath, falling below the waist, contributes added charm to the soft drapery of the revers
- A huge jabot collar, cut in one with the bodice, gives the final Louiseboulanger touch to this most effective and distinguished summer town dress, "44," the fabric of which is a very supple navy-blue crêpe with large façonné polka-dots. The belt, tying in front, emphasizes further the wrap-around movement of the skirt

MORE ELEGANCE

AFTER NOON

• Last summer, when we dropped into the Ritz for a cup of tea, the ladies to right and to left and behind and before us were nearly all wearing simple, rather severe crêpes de Chine. We did a little secret lamenting in our corner about the fall and decline of the gracious tea-hour tradition. This—as far as clothes were concerned—might be one o'clock and a business luncheon.

A day or so ago, we dropped back into the same room, and it brightened us considerably. The women looked better than they had for years. Sheer materials in soft colours dominated the room. The old monotony was gone—banished by a new subtlety of cut and drapery. The smart world seemed to have become aware that the tea-hour is a gracious hour and that at last you can “dress up” a little more. Crêpe de Chine was varied by crêpe roma and chiffons. Two or three women wore the new chiffon suits—those delightful paradoxes of femininity and tailoring that look so 1930. There were chiffon ensembles with long chiffon coats. Every hem-line swung within three or four inches of the ankle. Nearly every sleeve was short—an inch or two above the elbow, and long gloves, wrinkled at the wrist and ending half-way to the elbow, added a sophisticated touch. Wide-brimmed hats cast deep shadows, and, without exception, each hat, large or small, had a feeling of milliner's trimming.

As we left the Ritz and turned onto Park Avenue, the same impression of greater formality prevailed. And we secretly thanked the dressmakers who have restored the charm of late afternoon with their more complicated, more feminine, more subtle afternoon dresses, such as those shown on these two pages.

VIONNET

• Vionnet is featuring grège for late summer afternoons, as being cool and inconspicuous under the glare of the tropical sun, and it is used with outstanding success as the background of this silk crêpe dress, “No. 3171,” which is printed in black with a widely spaced design that is very smart. By means of the subtle, inexplicable cut that is typical of this house, the bodice is crossed, draped, and knotted and ends in a girdle that ties at the side. The effect is one of dignified simplicity and sophistication. A wide-brimmed hat gives the necessary formal accent.

GOLF AND TENNIS CLOTHES

THERE IS A NICE SWING IN THE NEW FITTED WAIST-LINE

THE way in which clothes for golf and tennis respond to fashion's change, yet manage, somehow, to adapt the new elements of the mode to their own use, is a continual source of satisfaction and surprise. When a slip-on sweater, belted over the skirt around the hips, begins to take on an archaic air, the chic golfer calmly tucks her sweater inside her skirt, which she belts around her waist at the natural line, and serenely continues her game. When linen blouses make their appearance, once again, she seizes upon their fresh coolness and wonders how she ever played through a summer without them.

She finds a slightly fitted and belted jacket as comfortable for golf as the cardigan she once wore, and a sleeveless vest, worn over a blouse, gives her the trimness, combined with freedom, that she wants. Skirts must be wide enough to allow a natural stance, but not so full that they billow in the breeze, and restrained circular cut or well-placed pleats can be handled to give the necessary freedom without flare.

There are, however, certain rules decreed by the laws of simplicity and good sense that hold true year after year. Colours that blend with the landscape—beiges, browns, greys, greens—are the most satisfying in the long run, though there is no reason why your tweed skirt should not be flecked with blue or yellow or red or all three. Conspicuous pattern or weave, fussy details, or exaggerated cut—with their slapstick movie air—are rigorously banned. Anything that is conspicuous—noticeably patterned stockings, elaborate jewellery, or too obvious make-up—is frowned down upon by those who play the sport for its own sake and like to feel themselves a part of the outdoor scene.

Hats are held down to fairly rigid rules, and no trimming of (Continued on page 94)

In the costume from Mirande, at the extreme left, a flannel skirt of green-and-grège plaid is combined with a grège toile de soie blouse with smartly rolled sleeves. The plaid note is echoed in a printed crêpe scarf that slips through slits

LELONG

A skirt and double-breasted vest, both of grey-blue woollen, worn with a simple white linen blouse, make Lucien Lelong's "Pas à Pas," at the upper right in the sketch. This practical golf costume has a skirt with partly stitched-down pleats

HÉLÈNE YRANDE

At upper left is shown a frock of white piqué, which the creator, Héléne Yrande, has called "Claudine." A well-fitted neck-line, skirt freedom, and a belt held in place by encrusted panels are excellent from a tennis view-point

GOUPY

While retaining its active sports character, this dress from Goupy, "Alleluia," lower left, gains much interest from the white façonné toile de soie of which it is made. It is cut on practical lines, with bows as trimming

REDFERN

White linen and rick-rack braid are one of the best of combinations. As used for the encrusted motif at the neck of the Redfern frock in the centre, the braid gives character to a dress of simple, but excellent lines

BLANCHE LEBOUVIER

An attractive effect is obtained in the Blanche Lebouvier frock, right, above, by using white silk piqué in an opposition of weave. The dress has unobtrusive pockets. Inverted box pleats make the skirt suitable for sports

MARTIAL ET ARMAND

Opposition of rib is used, also, in Martial et Armand's white silk piqué dress, "Printanier," at the lower right. The short sleeves are a comfortable length, and wide box pleats are cleverly encrusted at each side of the skirt

VOGUE has gone into the cinema. Every fortnight, the latest fashions step right out of the pages of the magazine and come to life on the screen. Every fortnight, a new Vogue film is released to theatres all over the country and a new angle of the mode is presented in motion. One week, you will see the bride's trousseau, perfect in every detail down to the bit of orange-blossom on her white satin slippers. A fortnight later, it may be a complete week-end wardrobe or an animated view of clothes for the beach.

This new medium has given Vogue a chance to show the practical side of fashions in actual operation—how a change of a coat or a cape or a hat will make one ensemble into two or how, by slipping on a jacket, you can make an evening gown into an afternoon dress. The camera picks out the salient details of each model and shows the right accessories for every costume in close-ups, so that you may see the latest shoes and purses and gloves, worn exactly as they should be worn.

During the showing of each film, the voice of Vogue will explain the colours and fabrics and all the outstanding points of chic. The illustration above shows one of the new Vogue movies in the making, and the shots on the opposite page are a few of the final releases.

Vogue makes these short fashion films at the Paramount Studios and presents them every fortnight at the Paramount Theatre in New York and at the theatres in the (Continued on page 82)

PING-PONG IN THE CLOUDS

THE SKY TERRACE OF MR. BERTRAND L. TAYLOR, JUNIOR

PENTHOUSE owners are the new aristocracy. They have the advantages of a town house plus those of an apartment—their own flowers and no furnace man. In imagination, they can sweep forward out of an age that ties the rest of us down, into the new day when life will take to the sky roads and earth will be a humdrum place for growing things to eat. They live on the top of the world, with the roofs of yesterday for their door-mats. The tragedy is that so few penthouse owners seem to realize their opportunities. On several peaks in Darien, they plant a few shrubs and stretch a few awnings, but the house itself is frequently just a replica of the apartment below—perfectly decorous, perfectly commonplace, instead of something as thrilling as a cocktail on an empty heart.

The main reason for this is that people usually wait to buy until the building has solidified. They get what is, instead of what might have been. If they had bought "in the steel"—which is the builder's way of expressing what he has to sell when all that has come to pass is the skeleton—they might have made strategic changes at comparatively small expense. Such architectural taking out of tucks and letting down of hems cost a fortune later on, and, like all meddling with completed products, the results are not likely to be as satisfactory as though the changes had been incorporated in the original plan.

Take the question of dramatizing the view—earthward, skyward, and across the gulf of more or less blue air that stretches between one tower and the next. This is not only a matter of terraces for outdoor living, but of windows for bringing outdoors inside. Windows throughout the building proper have been arranged for symmetry, and interfering with their size and placing is difficult, if not impossible. But the penthouse is a law unto itself, and, if the owner starts early, he can do all sorts of interesting things—long windows to the floor that give on terraces, other long windows perched above nothing, with iron balconies for finish and security, windows placed for the grouping of furniture from which to get the most spectacular view, rather than windows serving as so many spots on a mere façade, perhaps a huge, round eight-foot window facing the sunset and showing New York at night like a handful of stars tossed on the sea.

As for windows that look up, there is an opportunity to turn what would be "inside space" on the floor below into a livable room in the penthouse by means of a skylight—hosed off by day to keep it clear of (Continued on page 92)

THE TEA-HOUR ON THE AUTHOR'S ROOF TERRACE

TO possess a fanciful, Ariel side, combined with one meticulously practical, inherited from Puritan forbears, and but a medium-sized crock of gold is to possess an equipment that seems inadequate to meet the struggle of an ever-demanding city life. But, by balancing the New England and the "Ariel" sides, keeping a sense of humour, as majordomo, and having as living quarters a small penthouse, one would indeed be a rusty robot if an atmosphere could not be achieved in a utilitarian as well as a distinctive manner.

The roofs and terraces of the modern buildings are as if one were standing on wishing carpets. By half closing the eyes and bringing into play the imaginative forces, one may be surrounded by any country one wills. There is a deep, luminous quality about the sky at twilight in New York, which creates a charmed background for the objects encircling us every day. Whistler must have foreseen our present form of cliff-dwelling, as he has expressed so picturesquely what can happen:

"And when the evening mist clothes the riverside with poetry, as with a veil, and the poor buildings lose themselves in the dim sky, and the tall chimneys become campanili, and the warehouses are palaces in the night, and the whole city hangs in the heavens, and fairy-land is before us . . ."

PENTHOUSE PARTIES

BY EDITH HAINES

At a penthouse tea-party, an ambrosial mixture was served from a beautiful Lowestoft bowl, while bright tin trays with gold paper doilies held the appetizers (illustrated on facing page). Large pineapples gave a modern note to Empire vases on the glass-topped metal tables, which were placed in front of the arbour

What wearied city dweller would not welcome luncheon on a penthouse terrace, where a scenic-painted awning provides shade and a fountain Pan pipes coolness? Each guest is provided with a table and tray set as for a place at the table, in the manner shown below. This meal has progressed to an entrée in individual baking dishes

From the "living quarters" of this particular penthouse, one steps out on a sky terrace, which, in spite of being a Manhattan Utopia, can at times also be, alack! an inanimate "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" reproduction. In the eight-thirty-ish morning sunlight, from surrounding chimney-pots pour vaporous, umber-tinted spirals, which hover over one's head, appeasing the artistic sense; then suddenly like a rocket they dissolve, and large crunchy cinders intermingled with charred bits of paper completely cover the tiles, forming a whirlwind at one's feet. Then come glistening afternoons, with a breeze from the Hudson, carrying woodsy odours from Central Park, and the honk of the motor horn and the smell of gasoline seem far away. One discovers that the problem to be solved is that of moulding these contradictory forces into an efficient and harmonious result—in which Ariel the sprite and the New England sense may restfully breakfast, lunch, tea, and dine together.

When the aforesaid whirlwind of cinders has arisen from feet to breakfast tray, and finger-tips have been smudged from contact with wicker chairs, recently exposed to a murky night—the thought comes that realism and idealism must be linked. So, after days of searching, a man is found whose sympathetic understanding at once grasps the idea that the need is (Continued on page 86)

A SOUND PLAN FOR THE YEAR-ROUND WARDROBE OF
THE WOMAN WITH A JOB

BOTH MODELS FROM ATKINS

WHEN I first went into the business world, I found the problem of an appropriate wardrobe a most puzzling and annoying one. But, after much experimenting, I think I have found a solution, and I am only too happy to let you have the benefit of my experience.

First of all, take a hint from the well-dressed business man! Is there any one more impeccably groomed? His clothes are well pressed, shoes well shined, and accessories in perfect order and cleanliness. It may be your opinion that a man's clothes are like a uniform, but the principle underlying this uniform is one well worthy of consideration and adoption by the business woman—who, let me add, can do this without, for a moment, forfeiting her individual femininity or trying to look in any way mannish.

Now, for the clothes themselves. The following plan is one that I have adopted with the greatest success and satisfaction to myself, and I think that, if you will follow closely, you, too, will see that it is the most compact and practical wardrobe that a woman in business could (Continued on page 80)

- A young business executive may face July weather successfully in the ensemble at the left, of brown-and-white Rodier crêpe printed in pen-scratch design. The one-piece dress with short sleeves has a short jacket to match

- There is always a place in the business world for dotted crêpe, and this brown-and-white square-dotted crêpe suit, extreme left, is one of the best. The two-button jacket has a peplum; the blouse is of handkerchief linen

• Printed crêpe in two shades of blue is used for the frock below, with a bateau neck and braided trimming

• A decided asset to a business woman's summer wardrobe is this grey crêpe three-piece suit, above left. The jacket has a soft collar, and the knife-pleated skirt is girdled with a sash. The grey crêpe blouse is sleeveless

• Going to tea directly from the office requires a suit such as the one in the centre, of light brown printed crêpe with a floral pattern in cream and green. The jacket is belted in front, and the cream flat crêpe blouse has a cut-out design

• Scorching summer days at a desk may be met coolly with the navy-blue cotton voile dress with embroidered dots shown at the right above. The wide, pleated revers on the collar are very becoming, and the dress launders easily

FOR THE COUNTRY

- The latest fabric for the country is cotton shirting, such as is seen in this blue-and-white dress, above left, with a tuck-in blouse with short sleeves and a skirt fastened with nickel-plated buttons on a shaped yoke
- The virtues of white cotton piqué for a tennis dress prompted its use in this sleeveless model, above right, which is buttoned at the side and has inverted pleats. A green belt adds a touch of colour
- Good form in golf now permits cotton shirting, which is used in brown-and-white stripes for the dress, shown left. White cotton piqué collar and cuffs and a gently flaring skirt are details of importance
- Cotton piqué has that sturdy, imperishable appearance that sports clothes demand, so that it seems exactly right in the pink golf dress at the extreme left. The side kick pleats are considerate of one's swing

- This green Belgian linen suit, above left, is given a town appearance by the intricate stitching and subtle fit of the peplum jacket. A green-and-white printed handkerchief linen blouse is an important factor in determining its chic
- Cool, yet not too casual for July days in town is this suit, above centre, of navy-and-white polka-dot handkerchief linen. The jacket is straight in line and piped in white, and with the suit is worn a white frilled handkerchief linen blouse
- Cotton piqué sharkskin—a new hot-weather fabric that has the firm qualities of its woollen namesake—successfully fashions this strictly tailored suit in black and white, above right. The simple tuck-in blouse is of white cotton piqué
- Black-and-white printed handkerchief linen stays in town appropriately in this two-piece dress, above, right, the blouse of which is worn over the skirt with a belt at the natural waistline. Pleated ruffles and a white band trim the model

MIDSUMMER CHIC

SEEN IN THE SHOPS

THEY ran into each other by chance at the end of a scorching day. Fifth Avenue shimmered with insufferable heat, and all the motors were dim through a mist of summer dust.

Sybil cried in anguish: "Anita, my dear, I am exhausted. Do let's find something cool in this broiling town."

Iced tea was frosty and tinkling, their table was in a dusky cool corner, and, somewhere, two violins played the more placid of the Viennese waltzes.

"Assuming that we are both in town as female birds of prey, what have you pounced on, this charming day? Hell couldn't be hotter," added Anita, lighting a Murad.

Sybil fished for her shagreen case. "I've been after clothes. And found them. When I landed last week from Europe, I found I didn't have a thing with which to golf or tennis myself through the rest of the summer, so I came in from the country to-day, and, I must say, in spite of the heat, it's been a voyage of discovery for this simple soul. Just to turn you green with jealousy, I'll read you my list." Sybil drew a scribbled-over paper from her bag.

"Before you begin, Sybil, where did you get that delicious nut-brown complexion? It makes me feel very pale and wan."

"On the beach, where I wear practically nothing at all—and lie for lazy hours in the sun. My bathing-suit is my only immodest costume this season. Even tennis dresses, which head my list, are no longer sun-back. You know it's a joy to find such practical, smart things in the shops. There are two schools, it seems, but I am inclined to stick to the skirt and sweater order of things rather than the one-piece tennis dress. Best has a marvellous collection (Continued on page 84)

THE SPELL of a beautiful skin!

Almost every girl has it at eighteen when the pores of her face are small and fine!

This is the time to begin to watch for the gradual coarsening that starts right after eighteen—and shows especially on nose, chin and forehead.

To keep your pores small and fine, use Woodbury's Facial Soap. It actually shrinks large pores to fineness, and guards against big pores.

Formulated by a skin specialist who spent a lifetime studying the skin and its needs, Woodbury's keeps the face pores small by freeing them of the hardened fatty substance that causes them to enlarge—contracting them to their natural size. The first time you use Woodbury's you will notice its astringent action on your skin.

Begin using Woodbury's today! With each cake of Woodbury's comes the booklet of the most famous skin treatments in the

ON HER DRESSING-TABLE

TOILET preparations that we wish to use in the bathroom must ordinarily be consigned to the cabinet shelves, because of their generally utilitarian aspect. Madame Bertie, in introducing three new preparations intended for use in the bathroom, has provided for them containers so smart in appearance that they will enhance any bathroom or dressing-table they may adorn. One set of these bottles is illustrated in the photograph above; another is a Lalique design, and the preparations are also available in their original French containers, which are simple and distinctive. The first of this trio is very finely powdered bath salts, which are intended to soften as well as perfume the bath water. The second is a body oil to be used after the bath. This is a delightful, amber coloured liquid in which oil is suspended in an alcohol solution, so that the preparation is at once stimulating and softening to the skin, correcting the dryness that frequent summer bathing induces. Another pleasant feature is a bland fragrance that is not apparent until the oil comes into contact with the skin, which then retains a faint perfume long after the preparation has been applied. The third item is an eye tonic, cool, clear green in colour and possessed of seemingly magic properties for resting and refreshing the eyes. The Bertie vanity-case, that smart black case with diminutive gilt hinges, has recently been designed to include a compartment of lip-salve, as well as compact rouge and powder. The Bertie products can be purchased in many of the better stores throughout the country.

ACCESSORIES TO SUMMER BEAUTY

Dorothy Gray's most recent contributions to feminine loveliness are a triple vanity-case and a new eau de Cologne. The vanity-case has an amusing setback design, not unlike a small sky-scraper in shape. The Dorothy Gray blues appear in a design against a silver background, and the case opens to reveal a generous supply of powder and rouge and a small lipstick, which, despite its miniature size, is practical and easy to use. The mirror is conveniently double-faced, and the case is also available in double form, with the lipstick omitted. The eau de Cologne makes its appearance at a time when every woman wishes to have such a preparation included among her toilet requisites. It is excellently blended and leaves a fresh and delicate after-fragrance, with a light overtone of carnation in its scent. It is available in generous-sized bottles with screw tops in drug and department shops.

An interesting and thoroughly practical bit of equipment for the woman who takes her beauty rites seriously is the Contouré applicator. This device, which consists of a glass globe screwed into a composition handle, is designed as an aid in applying facial creams and lotions. After a cleansing or an emollient cream has been applied, the globe of the applicator is filled with hot water (which is easily accomplished by unscrewing the handle as directed) and passed over the face. The heat liquifies the cream so that it penetrates beneath the skin and serves to best advantage, either for cleansing or nourishing purposes. In giving yourself a light facial massage, this contrivance adds a professional touch. The smooth curve of the glass and the even heat are soothing and pleasant to the skin, and the curved sides of the applicator can be used beneath the eyes and around the corners of the nose most successfully. This is also effective when filled with ice-cold water, to use as an astringent in itself, or to increase the action of a finishing or astringent lotion. The applicator may be purchased at the toilet-goods counters in many department shops.

LIPS AND FINGER-TIPS

Finger-tips that complement your lips is the new slogan of Peggy Sage, an expert in all matters that pertain to the manicure. To carry out this theory, she has created three different sets of lipsticks and liquid polishes that match in colour, in light, dark, and medium shades. The lipstick, which is pointed in shape, a feature that proves of assistance in correctly shaping the colour to the contours of the lips, is of the light, smooth variety that will not cake, a quality that is especially to be appreciated in hot weather. The duplicating of these attractive shades on the lips by the tips of the fingers is an especially effective note with the light costumes of summer. The polishes and the lipsticks, together with every variety of manicure preparation, may be purchased in the Peggy Sage New York and resort salons and in many of the better shops.

"Shalimar," the Guerlain perfume beloved of so many, is for the first time presented in a smaller size, and at a correspondingly smaller price. It is in the same graceful, urn-shaped flacon with the same incomparable fragrance and can be purchased in all of the places where Guerlain products are sold.

Look out, Europe, here she comes!

This is Mildred on her way to Europe—attractive, capable, the secretary of a well-known business man in Albany. She has forgotten the sacrifices necessary to make this trip possible; the lunches she didn't eat; the little things she went without. They are all behind now. Europe and romance lie ahead.

There will be nice men on the boat who will dance with her again and again—so she thinks. But she is mistaken. They will only dance once.

There will be gay little bridge parties bright with badinage and the exchange of wit. Sure there will—but she won't be included.

Perhaps some attractive man will walk the moonlit decks with her and, recognizing the qualities that make her one woman out of a hundred, will ask her to marry him. Perhaps he will—but the chances are against it.

If you have ever come face to face with a real case of halitosis (unpleasant breath) you can understand how it might well be an obstacle to pleasant business, professional, and social relations. It is the unforgivable social fault.

The insidious thing about halitosis is that you never know when you have it. It does not announce itself to the victim. Important to remember also, is the fact that few people escape it entirely. That is because every day in any normal mouth, conditions capable of causing halitosis are likely to arise.

Common causes are: stomach derangements due to excesses of eating or drinking, fermenting food particles in the mouth, defective or decaying teeth, pyorrhea, catarrh, and infections of the nose, mouth or throat.

The pleasant way to put your breath beyond suspicion, is to rinse the mouth with full strength Listerine, the safe antiseptic. Every morning. Every night. And between times before meeting others.

Since it is antiseptic, full strength Listerine checks food fermentation. It is also a remarkable germicide* which attacks infection from which odors spring. Finally, being a deodorant, it destroys the odors themselves, leaving both mouth and breath fresh, sweet, and clean.

Keep Listerine handy in home and office, and drop a bottle in your bag when travelling. It puts you on the safe side; makes you acceptable to others. Lambert Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A.

*Though safe to use in any body cavity, full strength Listerine kills even the resistant Staphylococcus Aureus (pus) and Bacillus Typhosus (typhoid) germs in counts ranging to 200,000,000 in 15 seconds. (Fastest time science has accurately recorded.)

Here's Economy

You get wonderful results with Listerine Tooth Paste—and it costs but 25¢ the large tube.

A WARDROBE FOR BUSINESS

possibly have. Every article of clothing is necessary, and the plan is workable all the year round.

A business woman's wardrobe should be divided into three parts: Day clothes (from nine o'clock in the morning until seven o'clock at night, and even later, if necessary); sports clothes (for town, motoring, and country week-ends); evening clothes (both formal and informal), and necessary luxuries and extras, for a fillip.

DAY CLOTHES

Summer clothes for town are uppermost in one's mind at the moment. What to wear to the office on blazing summer days is a problem; it must be something that will look cool and charming and yet be simple enough not to need infinite care. The shops are filled with suitable types of hot-weather clothes just now—as you may see from the illustrations on pages 64 and 65. Silk suits with a galaxy of blouses, sleeveless and otherwise, are extremely smart, but my leanings for midsummer are more toward a crêpe dress and jacket—the dress with a short sleeve, if possible, so that it may be worn without the jacket on the hottest days. We seem to be out at the elbows, this season, but gloves, six-button or longer and smartly wrinkled, are essential to chic. A printed crêpe dress and suit or jacket ensemble are the mainstays of a midsummer wardrobe. For the most wilting days, a cotton dress in navy-blue, brown, or black-and-white is very useful. Either of the straw hats shown on page 64 would be suitable to wear with these dresses or a suit, and the hats are light-weight enough to be comfortable.

Plain crêpe has a distinction all its own, this season, and, if possible, do include a silk suit like the grey one shown on page 65. This may look simple and businesslike with a handkerchief linen blouse or more formal with a matching crêpe blouse. These four costumes may be changed about as to plain or printed fabrics, but do select these types if you wish to be essentially of this season.

Nor have I forgotten your summer resort clothes. These are necessary luxuries, for they can only be worn for this one purpose and then must be put away until next summer. For this reason, let me warn you to have only the smartest and simplest of little dresses that will stand service for two seasons, because they rarely ever wear out during the first summer vacation, and, if they are of good material and good cut, they should stand in good stead for at least two years. Some interesting suggestions for sports clothes are found on page 69. Have only traditional summer sports shoes in brown-and-white, the simplest of straw hats, and a white coat.

It is sometimes said that one can get along with but a single coat in a wardrobe. I have never found this to be true; in fact, I find it impossible, in an active life, to get along with less than three of them—a tweed, a day coat, and, of course, a formal evening coat. The day coat should be of a conservative colour (it, too, should be chosen with the thought in mind that it must be worn more than one season), and it should be of the very best material, preferably without a pattern or an almost invisible one. Select a dark cloth, either smooth or one of the pebbly surfaced ones that are so new; don't trim the coat too lavishly with fur; and don't let it be too complicated in cut. Remember that this coat must look correct at nine o'clock in the morning and still be smart enough to wear to dinner at night, if necessary. I find it most advisable to have a set of accessories to go expressly with the coat: a simple, yet smart hat, plain pumps, a plain antelope or leather bag, beige suède pull-on gloves, and stockings to match the gloves or of a slightly darker sun-burn tone.

If the coat is black or in a colour—such as dark brown, dark green, or dark blue—you should have at least one dress of silk or light-weight woolen to match the coat in colour in order to complete the ensemble. Here again, you can add as many dresses with hats to match as you need. They should be simple, but smart and in colours that either harmonize or contrast with your day coat. A skirt to match the coat, with two or three tuck-in blouses, is another excellent means of providing changes of costume. And all the "do's" and "don'ts" listed under sports clothes apply to the day clothes, as well.

Thus far, I have had in mind only those clothes that are appropriate for business wear. I have not forgotten that you need a more formal costume that may be worn to the office and still be appropriate for luncheon or tea or for restaurant dining and the theatre in town. Though I do not feel that a skirt and blouse is ever as formal as a dress, a skirt to match your coat and a blouse of formal fabric and cut would be in good taste for such occasions. If you prefer to have a dress to serve this purpose, it may, of course, be more elaborate than the dresses you wear every day to the office, but, knowing your good sense, I hardly have to tell you, do I?, that this special dress should not be absolutely sleeveless, it should not have a jagged hem-line, it should not have too many fluffy ruffles and lace trimmings, if any. If you want to have a fluffy ruffle dress for Sunday evening bridge, don't wear it to the office!

With this more formal attire, you will need, of course, a slightly more elaborate hat, longer pull-on gloves in cream, flesh, or pale beige tones, dark flesh coloured silk stockings, afternoon bag, and one-strap or plain high-heeled pumps of patent leather or suède—never satin ones, of course.

SPORTS CLOTHES

One's life and wardrobe are absolutely incomplete without a tweed coat. Rain or shine, it serves for town, motoring, travelling, country, and active sports wear. It may be fur-trimmed or not, as you wish, and in choosing your tweed, please keep in mind that you undoubtedly are going to wear the coat for more than one season and that, consequently, it must be of a pattern and of a colour that are not only becoming, but of which you will not quickly tire. The Vionnet wrap-around tweed coat shown in the June 21 issue of Vogue, on page 64, is an excellent example, which would last you at least two seasons.

With your tweed coat, it is advisable to have a skirt of a tweed either to match or harmonize. In town, you can wear with this skirt tuck-in or outside blouses of crêpe de Chine, exotic silk (such as shantung or tussur), or jersey. For your week-ends in the country or for motoring, you can wear with the skirt knitted wool or Angora sweaters or cardigans in colours to match one or more of the colours of the tweed. Packard owners keep their cars—far longer, both in months and miles, than do owners of less distinguished vehicles of like size. For Packard not only builds long-lived cars, but preserves the characteristic beauty of their design.

Everyone knows that motor car depreciation results more from outmoded appearance than from outworn mechanism. And that depreciation is the one great item of ownership expense. The Packard owner knows that the beauty of his car remains ever modern—that by keeping his Packard a little longer, he enjoys luxurious transportation at ordinary car cost.

Packard cars today are finer, more luxurious than ever. Packard constantly betters, constantly refines. But Packard improvement is evolutionary, not revolutionary. A Packard today is a Packard tomorrow—in beauty, in comfort and in distinction.

Because motor cars, like people, are known by the company they keep, there is something significant in the vogue of the Chevrolet Six among those whose taste and discrimination are never subject to question.

For practical purposes, I find it is best to have a hat either to match the fur on the coat or repeat the dominating colour of the tweed or match the scarf or blouse. For town, your shoes should be Oxfords, Richelieus, one-strap or plain pumps; medium or high solid leather heels look best with tweeds. The only trimming allowable is a bit of stitching or broguing. Your bag should be of leather to match the shoes. Gloves—beige or light brown washable suède or antelope pull-ons. Stockings—silk or thin lisle in beiges and sunburn tones.

For the country, you should have low-heeled walking shoes, light brown, hand-stitched, washable antelope pull-on gloves, and lisle or light-weight wool stockings in the darker sunburn tones. A beret is serviceable, and attractive ones are made of tweed to match the coat. A woollen or knitted scarf is a necessity.

For town wear, you should have one dress, at least, either to match or harmonize with the dominating colour of the tweed of your coat. This dress may be of tweed to match or of light-weight woollen, jersey, or silk. The extra dresses to go under this coat should harmonize with or match the tweed, and, if you have hats to match these dresses in colour, they, too, will be correct in colour when you have your coat on. If you watch your colour scheme carefully, it will be possible to interchange hats and dresses and thus have several different costumes. However, one word of warning: It is wisest to keep your outfits for sports and day wear separate.

In the evening, a good warm coat is a necessity for winter. You will find that it will be much more useful and convenient if it is made along the most conservative lines and of a not too elaborate material, for thus it can serve for several seasons. Vogue designs offer a large selection of this type, not too extreme in any way, and you will find them very useful, especially if you already have the fur yourself. In midsummer, the evening wrap may be very inexpensive, an unlined crêpe jacket or chiffon wrap.

I have already mentioned a dress for Sunday evening bridge. The more formal dress recommended under day clothes is appropriate for this purpose, but it is also well to have an informal evening dress for small dinners with bridge afterwards in the houses of friends. I find most appropriate a simple dress of black georgette, chiffon, or heavy crêpe with the new longer hem-line, and, with this dress, I wear a short jacket to match.

Such a jacket dress is also correct to wear for formal restaurant dining in town when one expects to go to the theatre and a cabaret afterwards. With it may be worn a dinner-hat, black satin or crêpe de Chine pumps, and cream elbow-length pull-on gloves.

And, of course, you need a formal evening dress. If you would profit by my experience, you would not have it so elaborate or so definitely "dated" that it could not serve for second-best later! Of course, its colour must go well with that of your evening coat. The pastel Augustabernard crêpe evening dresses shown in the May 24 issue of Vogue have the simplicity and dignity of line that will not disappear with the current season. Then you need pumps to match or contrast with the dress, elbow-length gloves, silk stockings in a sunburned shade, and a bag of velvet, crêpe de Chine, or lovely old brocade.

These basic necessities apply to both the summer and the winter. If you live in New York with its extremes of weather, you need two sets of sports, day, and evening clothes, one of winter weight and the other of summer weight. If you are lucky enough to be living in Florida or in California, I should say that only one complete set of these clothes need serve you all the year around. I have kept in mind the rigours of northern climates and suggest, as necessary luxuries for the winter, a sports fur coat, light-weight woollen blouses, a woollen scarf for winter and a silk one for summer. For spring or autumn, one might add a tailored or dressmaker suit of men's suiting, light-weight woollen, or lacy tweed, with tuck-in blouses of silk or linen.

Your clothes for active sports wear—tennis, golf, and horseback riding—must be considered, but these I leave to your own good discretion and good taste.

You may have your sports, but I wager that you like to lounge around after a day's work as well as I do, and, for this purpose, lounging pyjamas of shantung in rather darkish colours are my favourites. Perhaps, you prefer a nice woolly robe or a padded one. I like my pyjamas of dark materials, for then I don't feel so en négligé if some one drops in of an evening to see me.

I have given you the minimum necessities for every demand of your life—no matter what the occasion, you will have on hand the correct thing to wear. Don't get anything more than you absolutely need, but always get the best. It pays in the end, both in wear and in self-respect.

HOW TO WASH

your new dull sheer hosiery

Silk-Eze is a new beauty soap for hosiery and lingerie. It does to them what cold cream does to your face. It cleanses, freshens and preserves their original beauty. It will preserve the lusterless finish of your dull, sheer new hosiery absolutely unchanged.

Silk-Eze is made by a secret formula containing ingredients lacking in ordinary soaps. It therefore washes all silks, rayons, woolens and elastic things quickly, easily and without weakening the original strength of the fibres or affecting the finish.

One tablespoon in a bowl of tepid water will wash up to five pounds of clothes. It dissolves instantly and the minute you feel the lovely softness of the water on your hands you know how kind it will be to your garments.

Take Silk-Eze with you this summer when you travel for it dissolves in any water and solves the problem of keeping your hosiery and underwear as fresh and lovely as when you bought them.

of all types of tennis clothes, such as flannel skirts that are very smart with jersey polo shirts and piqué skirts with cotton mesh polo shirts. I invested in them wisely, if not too well for my bank-account—, cotton is so smart on the courts and, really, I think, the most practical for midsummer. At Saks-Fifth Avenue, I found a divine sleeveless model in white cotton piqué with a square neck-line and buttons all the way down the front, and it had such a lovely little price tag! These are really the only sleeveless dresses I bought—everything else seems to have short sleeves above the elbows. I think they look newest this year. For tennis, I like a sleeveless dress next best to a sweater and skirt. I ordered four and an alluring new knitted cardigan—very sporty—, which I found at Saks to wear over the white dresses, and a light-weight yellow Angora cardigan at Stern's. Macy has entrancing striped sleeveless cotton shirts to wear with white skirts or with matching skirts for tennis. Instead of my usual sneakers this year, I found, at Lord and Taylor, laced canvas shoes with gum soles that don't slip off my heels. Spurred on by the moderate prices of these, I felt justified in so many tennis clothes.

"Next, I searched for golf dresses. Best are featuring short-sleeved tuck-in golf dresses of dull silk jacquard shirting and end-to-end cotton sudanette, different from the plain sudanette of last season, with a dull silky appearance. These shirt-waist effect, tailored dresses are too smart for words. Cotton madras shirting golf dresses at Saks-Fifth Avenue tempted me sorely—especially the one-piece model with a mannish collar and ties, yet oh so feminine! At Stern's, I found short, one-button, white chamois gloves that I bought with avidity; I have innumerable pull-on gloves, and these look very smart for driving with my white coat. To wear with every-day cotton or linen dresses, I bought, also at Stern's, white chamoisette pull-on gloves and a sweet black leather and white piqué belt.

HATS OFF

"As to hats, they say that even Mademoiselle Chanel goes without a hat everywhere now, but that does not influence me—I find an all 'round sports hat essential, with a smallish brim. Saks-Fifth Avenue has a stitched linen model that is made in every colour under the sun. The white berets of stringy crochet at Saks-Fifth Avenue are new and chic. Best has a cloche-shaped panama with very narrow patent leather belts that buckle—in all colours.

"Aside from the indispensable brown-and-white pumps, startling things are being done with fabric shoes that may be worn very successfully with crêpe dresses. Stern has an excellent pump in Tosca, a linen fabric with faille-like surface, which may be dyed to suit your fancy.

"Bonwit Teller showed me a white coat, and, from the moment I first saw it, I was lost. Every summer wardrobe needs a coat to wear over sports clothes, and an all-white coat seems to me the most useful. It is hard to find anything new in sports coats, but this model has that perfectly fitted look with a slight flare. It was belted only in the front—, not extreme—, a model that should be good for several seasons. And that is really all."

"I'm devoted with a sinful desire to go and buy all these things, too," remarked Anita. "Things for the house and garden have been occupying my mind so exclusively all day that the thought of clothes has all the charm of novelty."

Sybil lighted another cigarette. "Tell me every word. I have to go and do likewise next week or as soon as I recuperate from to-day, and I haven't the faintest idea where to begin."

"Well, I am the original pathfinder as far as house and garden are concerned, or, at least, I feel like it after to-day."

Anita in turn dived in her purse and emerged with a list that rivalled Sybil's for general messiness and an air of hard usage.

FOR THE HOUSE

"Under the heading 'house,' she announced, "I dreadingly wrote picnic baskets this morning, with a vision of being shown horrors. But far from it, my dear. I was torn between a plain wicker hamper at Vendôme's and another fitted wicker one at Lewis and Conger's. In fact, I postponed the decision and had them both sent home! Another discovery was a sweet little English tea-basket—tiny and useful.

"Next, I wrote 'linen,' and what linen I found! Enchanting French printed handkerchief-linen luncheon sets at McCutcheon with beguiling flower designs, organdie sets at Lord and Taylor, cool looking as ice, and sets at Mosse with amusing eyelet embroidery. I'm going to give a luncheon every day to show off my linen.

"'Games' came next on the list. Did you ever think what a tremendous psychological effect a lot of games, ready to be played, have on the success of a party? They look so inviting. I found superb cork-topped tables for backgammon at my beloved Hammacher-Schlemmer. And a triumph of ingenuity is the weather-proof table for playing ping-pong outdoors that I got at Macy's. I've a deck tennis court on the lower terrace, and, with dozens of placid games like checkers and parchesi, and the inevitable bridge and poker, I'm all set for the hot weather. By the way, will you come over to lunch on Sunday? You can play pokerette, a version of poker just made for lazy people like you, and it will give you a chance to wear your new white crêpe dress."

Anita stopped for breath and powdered her nose.

"At Macy's, I found a marvellous wedding present for Gardner and Joan. Sea-going china for their yacht. Macy has just got them in this year. I was torn between that and a breakfast set of plain English earthenware with three initials in colour. But I'm having two fascinating flags put on the yacht china, in Gardner's colours, which should charm him. I found an imported scalloped cotton sunshade that's unbelievably adjustable—you can fasten it on any type of garden furniture, and the colours are delightful."

"Where?" asked Sybil with interest.

"Hammacher-Schlemmer again."

"I'll be a vision when I do my own grubbing in the garden. I found, at Lord and Taylor, some mechanic's overalls in shantung that tie at the ankle, with a striped shirting jacket, and an enticing rough straw hat a mile wide. I know I'll want to wear it and shock my grande dame mother-in-law to whom trousers are still—still, my dear—as masculine as beards.

"Well that's all. We seem to be the title characters in a play called 'They Got What They Wanted!'"

She lighted another cigarette while Sybil paid the check.

And so they went home and lived happily all summer.

It doesn't matter so much to a house committee that the strength of Wamsutta Percale will show them a tidy saving on replacements — and that its lightness will reduce their laundry bills.

These, however, are considerations which do appeal to thrifty housewives, like yourself, who buy more Wamsutta Percale sheets and pillow cases — year in and year out — than all the smart clubs and big hotels put together.

neither for the whisk of a broom nor for an eight-hour day, but for a bid-dable worker, who would come each morning for a short time, leaving all in a cleanly and glossy state, which, I assure you, is a difficult accomplishment on city roofs! Behold! at last, the transformation! A goddess in trailing robes gathers no dust as she passes! On the back of the roof, a large box was built with a door at each end, and in it, each night, wicker chairs, small tables, and cushions are put away, for, to use large and cumbersome chairs and couches on an open terrace, is most impractical.

One evening in early June, during the time of adjustment to terrace living, a table was spread for dinner. On it, among other things, was a pair of tall, colourful, flower-filled vases. As the hour drew near for the guests to arrive, an ominous chill crept through the open doorway. Peering out, I was aghast to see a clinging mist drifting in from the East River, bringing with it an obstreperous wind, which set the tall vases toppling and the wispy table-cover damply fluttering. This minor disaster put an end to that form of terrace dining. Since then, each guest has a tray of papier-mâché, of a variety sufficiently light to carry, which is placed before each person on an individual table, just before dinner is served. Three courses—or, if a fourth is wished, a melon to begin with—are more than sufficient on a summer night. For the first course, there is, perhaps, cold, jellied soup or, on individual plates, an hors-d'œuvre of, first, a layer of chopped white cabbage, with pieces of tuna fish on it, and, last, a layer of chopped egg. With this, a sauce of thin mayonnaise into which are grated fresh horseradish, a little Worcestershire sauce, and chopped ripe olives may be passed separately. The next course might be small broilers, cooked with mushrooms and new onions in a casserole. Sliced boiled tongue may be prepared in the same way. These combinations should be served in French earthenware casseroles, which can be bought in New York City. For the vegetable, there may be stuffed or broiled tomatoes (unless the first course is tomato soup); new beets, diced and arranged in a ring of beet greens; asparagus cut in pieces about an inch long and served with butter sauce and a dash of lemon; or string-beans baked with cream and cheese. For dessert, there will be a deep-dish gooseberry pie; raspberry ice with fresh cherries, halved, around it; or individual strawberry shortcakes, which can also be made, later in the summer, with peaches.

A TRAY LUNCH

For the tired, hot, and bored who are detained in town, a luncheon can be served in the same "tray manner," and, unconsciously, the guests relax, while the fountain drips, and the awning waves in the ever-present breeze. Some luncheon suggestions with which to tempt these guests are, as a first course, a hot cabbage timbale surrounded by carrots cut in long, thin pieces and cooked in cream flavoured slightly with curry, arranged with alternating piles of peas or with cooked cucumber, diced, in drawn butter. Or, slices of sautéed eggplant, with a small pile of asparagus on top and Hollandaise sauce over it, may be served in individual glass baking dishes in place of the cabbage. Next is either a salad of lettuce and water-cress, with chopped bacon and French dressing, or boiled ham, sliced thin, and shaped into the form of cornucopias filled with small pieces of raw tomato, mixed with well-seasoned heavy mayonnaise and served on shredded lettuce. The last course is halves of cantaloupes filled with cut-up pineapple, over which finely chopped mint is sprinkled, or another choice is fresh cherry tarts.

In the same early period of inexperience, an afternoon housewarming was planned. Behind the boxwood-trees on the terrace, there stood just a small table, unadorned, except for business-like bowls of ice, and tall and short flagons, as an ambrosial mixture was to be shaken up, when the guests would come. As the afternoon waned, they arrived en masse. The host was then seen to disappear for long stretches, returning at intervals, with a strained expression and an obvious lack of attention to his fellow guests and the animated talk going on around him. For, in response to a hand (stretched from a window that opens onto the terrace) laden with ever-fresh supplies for his mixtures, he would vanish again and again, in nervous haste, to minister to the needs of new arrivals. And trials were not alone for the host—also the hostess must have her moments. Two crashes within an hour is indeed a strain on Perfect Poise! China comports of ancient lineage, holding various appetizers, were shattered on the terrace tiles! And what else could be expected with constantly moving forms in narrow spaces? Alas! We Americans are prone to a feverish form of entertainment.

A LESS HECTIC PARTY

So the following year, when the time drew near for another "party," a more gracious and less hectic plan was evolved. At one end of the terrace, two glass tables with metal frames, acquired at the Mayhew Shop, in New York, were placed together and in the centre was a Lowestoft bowl; in it, a large piece of ice. This time, the ambrosia was mixed and ready in large bottles, to be poured over the ice when needed, and the glasses were filled by a guest, dressed as for a garden-party, making a picturesque and magnetic spot in which to foregather at one end. From the other end came strains of music, all this releasing the host, who, this time, mingled with his guests, as a courtier, out of the gallant past. On each side of the refreshing bowl were thin trays, round and oblong, in black and red. No broken heirlooms this time! On the trays, large gilt paper doilies were used, effective for out-of-doors. For appetizers, there were large potato chips spread with cream cheese, mixed with mayonnaise and chives. There was a mixture of liverwurst sausage, mashed with a fork, together with cream, butter, and chopped pickles, and this was spread on round crackers. There were small "wienies," cut in half, wrapped in bacon, held with a toothpick, and broiled. Butter crackers, buttered, sprinkled with Parmesan cheese and a dash of Worcestershire sauce, and heated in the oven, were another easy thing to serve, and very tiny fish-balls, also on toothpicks, were especially appreciated by the male sex. Glasses of iced tea were passed on the terrace, while, at one end of the living-room, hot tea was served from an old white-and-blue French china set, on an antique silver tray. In contrast to the informal setting without, the formality of the "antiques" within was appropriate. As the terrace (Continued on page 90)

TO-NIGHT IN NEW YORK

The modernistic lighting looks like platinum lipsticks stood on end; one sees the very best and the very worst of evening dresses, and the whole is like the movies' conception of a night-club. This impression is due mostly to the large and efflorescent show, which is plus du théâtre que le théâtre. Dozens and dozens of the most glorified American show-girls who ever dazzled eyes parade about or do astounding dances, while lean, haggard young men throw themselves about with incredible disregard for life and limb. This is entertainment at its New York best, and, it may be added with encouraging smiles, that there is no cover charge.

One emerges on streets that jangle with milk-carts, and, still restless, still stimulated by the tempo of New York, one taxis up to Harlem, to the Cotton Club, and climbs stairs that are nearly vertical to an African bedlam, insanely lighted by a revolving ball with a thousand facets. Weary Negroes, still preserving a superb hauteur, bring White Rock. One laughs for a bit at the extraordinary species of dancing exhibited by assorted couples on the floor, and then the show begins.

A dozen or two slender little girls, pale café au lait, beat the floor like a drum, their active feet in time to the vibrant Negro orchestra. A young man, almost too handsome, sings a song to a handsome coloured woman, in a faultless middle-Western accent. Another young man, with an extraordinary expression of gloom, makes frightful faces while he sings a typical Harlem "Red Hot Mamma" song. An enormous Negro haughtily plays a tiny piano.

At last, one starts for home, crammed with all New York has to offer to the bored and weary-in-spirit. Driving south, one wonders why there are not more modernistic night-clubs and recalls a rumour that Bel Geddes is designing one.

Or, instead of these sophisticated amusements, perhaps one has felt a desire for German gemütlichkeit and loud, fast waltz music. One has gone to Keller's on Eighty-Eighth Street. This place is genuine, with a clientele largely German. The orchestra, to suit all tastes, is partly in dinner-coats and partly in Tyrolian peasant dress. There are red table-cloths and violent Hungarian decorations. For some unexplored reason, a large Persian rug hangs behind the orchestra.

The atmosphere is bland and Teutonic. One grows expansive and genial, lifting a vast, substantial beer mug. There is a great deal to watch. All the German habitués can waltz, and waltz beautifully; one dauntless young man takes on every girl in his party in turn and whirls them around and around the room, until his brow glistens and his eye is dim with dizziness, but his air of ingenuous gaiety remains unimpaired.

Then begins some of the most diverting entertainment to be found in New York. Two sturdy peasants dance a species of Bavarian Black Bottom, in which a great deal of hearty face-slapping takes place. An expansive gentleman in a tail-coat sings melting classics sentimentally, in the thoroughgoing German fashion.

And then the Schnitzelbank song is sung. In the history of the singing world, there have been many good songs, but surely none so funny as this. A large chart, with pictures, illustrates the song, and the benign Mr. Keller points to each picture in its turn with the air of a learned German professor. This song goes on nearly forever. It is all about the Schnitzelbank (which is only a carpenter's bench), Jacob Mayer (the ancestor of all the Rothschilds), a "gude frau," and many another object that even the pictures do not explain. It has a simple Teuton tune that is very catchy, and the whole place rocks to the Schnitzelbank song.

Another night, who knows, with a hot breeze and a good car and a restless foot, one may feel the urge to go out of town and find what the road has to offer.

Past Grant's Tomb, one stops at the Claremont for dinner. This place is so old that one can almost imagine Peter Stuyvesant and the Dutch patroons dining here. Its view is, perhaps, the most superb in the city. Through the black tulle of the night, one sees, like a crystal necklace, the new bridge over the Hudson, an amusement park on the Palisades like Maxfield Parrish's "City of Brass," and the bewildering modernistic pattern of the search-lights. Unfortunately, the fleet can not always be in, nor stalwart sailors engaged in amorous dalliance on Riverside Drive, but, as Ratty in "The Wind in the Willows" would say, "there's always something happening on the river," and one could watch its changing scenes for hours.

The food at the Claremont is excellent, and a quaint aura of the 'Nineties envelops the place. One takes a last look at a large sign advertising Jack Frost Sugar in luminous capitals, and leaves.

Where one goes next is a matter for throwing coins into the air. At Ben Riley's Arrowhead Inn, out on Riverdale Avenue—one may dance to a Meyer Davis orchestra, in, curiously, an Italian Renaissance setting, dine out on the terrace, and still be only a forty-minute run from New York. Long View Inn, outside of Yonkers, has a view from a high hill overlooking the Hudson. Joe Smallwood's, on the North Shore of Long Island, is extremely popular, and one is near the water.

As a last suggestion, one can only hint at Coney Island, on a summer night. Who could describe its glorious artificiality, its absurd silver-gilt beauty, its superb trumpery. High on a roller-coaster, low in the passages of a subterranean cavern, dancing on a glittering floor, strolling on a raucous boardwalk, one thrills to the ridiculous fascination of this funny, famous place.

So there it is—New York, seasoned to taste. Top-hats or black ties, blue suits, or the oldest tweed in the closet,—let them be gay. Where shall we go to-night?

"A new Land of Fashion is being opened up, and you are about to enter into a realm of Great Elegance, such as none of us has travelled in for a long time." Thus, the forecast article in the Autumn Forecast issue of Vogue starts out to pique our interest. And thus we caution the reader not to plan her autumn wardrobe until she has seen this number, for the Way of the Silhouette will be long. This issue of Vogue appears on the news-stands on the seventeenth of July

HOPE WILLIAMS

TWO seasons ago an actress new to Broadway made her début in a minor part in Paris Bound. An actress with individuality so striking, charm so insistent, as to win instant recognition . . .

Suddenly and triumphantly the talented Hope Williams was in our midst—a young person obviously to be reckoned with. Delightedly the critics hailed her . . . predicted great things . . .

By the time another season came Holiday was ready, with a leading rôle created for Hope Williams. Through a long, successful run she played in this delightful comedy to audiences enchanted by her poise and freshness, her untrammelled originality.

During the past season, in Rebound, Hope Williams has again appeared in a rôle created especially for her, her easy grace and endearing naturalness a joy to all beholders . . .

"A stage star realizes she is under the closest observation," says this lovely young woman. "It is tremendously important that she look her best both on the stage and off. Above everything else, her skin must be always faultlessly smooth and soft. I find Lux Toilet Soap an excellent beauty care."

You will want to try this fragrant white soap. Its gentle lather is so soothing and refreshing! Begin today to enjoy it—at just 10¢ a cake!

★HOPE WILLIAMS is among the many, many beautiful stars of the Broadway stage who depend on Lux Toilet Soap to keep their skin always above reproach. Like 9 out of 10 of the famous Hollywood screen stars, they are devoted to this gentle white soap, which, as a result of their enthusiasm, is in the dressing rooms of legitimate theaters all over the country—71 of the 74 in New York!

TAN WITHOUT SUNBURN

No longer need you fear the torture of sunburn. Lélú Sunstick, the scientific French preparation for the prevention of sunburn, is your safeguard. Smooth it into the skin . . . the sun liquifies it . . . the skin instantly absorbs it. While coolly protected the skin becomes an even golden tan.

FROM LÉLU OF PARIS

Comes this delightful discovery for keeping the skin fresh and smooth. Smartly packaged in black and silver . . . cased in aluminum it is easily applied before going out into wind and sun.

awning dimmed the light in the room, a pair of lighted, branched silver candlesticks were placed on the tea-table and, in the centre, on a mirror, was a high glass and silver comport, which had stemless white peonies lining the edge, like the paper round an old-fashioned bouquet, and light blue larkspur rising stiffly from the centre. The table was covered with a cloth of silk damask in eggshell colour. On silver lustre dishes, with silver paper doilies under them, were the sandwiches, of two kinds only. Between round slices of white bread was a filling of cooked mushrooms and hard-boiled egg, minced and moistened with mayonnaise dressing, and between oblong slices of nut bread was a mixture of beaten cream and grated horseradish, sweetened a bit. On Waterford glass comports were cookies of different shapes, round gingerbread cakes, and apple-strudel in small rolls instead of squares. These were in place of cake, which is always sticky and, therefore, an unwelcome item at any summer tea-party.

Thus is pictured what can be done, not on the air, but in the air, and how the living scale can be tuned to a low or high tempo, as one wills, without complete dependence on a large crock of gold.

CROWNINSHIELD COLLECTION

His works of art now number one hundred and thirty canvases, a large group of bronzes by such men as Maillol, Degas, Fenosa, and others, a stimulating selection of African masks, statues, and fetishes, and a varied collection of French etchings, prints, and water-colours by such men as Matisse, Picasso, and Derain. His thirty Despiau bronzes and his twenty Segonzac paintings and water-colours are the largest groups of the works of these artists to be found in any American collection or perhaps in Europe. It may be inferred that, when he is stirred by some special quality in an artist's work, he is not merely content with two or three representative examples, but prefers to be surrounded and immersed in the quality that they express.

Despiau and Segonzac are the key-notes of the collection. At first thought, it might seem as if these artists appealed to very different emotions—that a taste that reacts to Segonzac's opulent, romantic interpretation of the modern point of view could not respond to the serene, un-stylized Hellenism of a Despiau portrait or nude. But an analysis of the attributes of these two men finds a meeting-point that makes their inclusion in the same collection a logical and coherent expression of taste. In both of them, lyricism and romanticism are expressed in accomplished and humanly understandable terms. Neither artist needs explanation. Their qualities are self-evident. The Despiau portrait heads of women (while a majority of them are obviously convincing portraits of individuals) have, nevertheless, a universality of appeal, and an expression of the essential, eternal feminine quality that makes them transcend artistic schools or periods. Segonzac's sumptuous emotional landscapes and figure compositions also appeal to universal emotions. His rich impastos of pigment and the nervous, aspiring line of his water-colours and etchings are as personal and expert a display of technique as are Despiau's plastic simplifications.

As romanticism, expressed in cultivated, accomplished terms, is the common denominator of the collection (which means a distaste for heavy-handed realism and the aridity of too cerebral abstractions), it is not surprising to find that the collection further includes examples of Bonnard's tender, blooming canvases of the intimate aspects of every-day life; Marie Laurencin's sophisticated naïveté; Pascin's opalescent eroticism, Kissing's seductive portraits and figure studies; Braque's dignified abstractions; Raoul Dufy's chic gaiety, the exotic vitality of African negro sculpture, Modigliani's poignant stylizations, Gromaire's distinguished use of the water-colour medium, and Frans Masereel's experiments in romanticized modernism. A fine collection of Segonzac's etchings, Matisse's lithographs, and of books illustrated by Pascin, Bonnard, Picasso, and Masereel are other evidences of the collector's enthusiasm.

An important point about his collection, and one which is an object-lesson to potential collectors, is the fact that the paintings and sculptures included in it were purchased before their present vogue brought about such very considerable advances in their prices.

To have started a collection at the very moment when collecting was ceasing to be the special province of the millionaire and commencing to be an expression of sophisticated modernity in men of more limited means is another evidence of Mr. Crowninshield's intuitiveness. He has proved that it is still possible for an art lover of comparatively moderate means (if he has an "eye" and a genuine emotional reaction to aesthetic quality) to buy the museum pieces of to-morrow, just as it was when the more sensitive collectors of the 'Nineties bought their Manets, Renoirs and Cézannes for a song. Such amateurs can still form a collection at a comparatively small initial expenditure. A collection of this sort will not only be a source of deep aesthetic pleasure to the owner, but, quite frequently, a more trustworthy financial venture than one's usual investments in Wall Street.

Mr. Crowninshield's paintings and bronzes are shown in an apartment overlooking the East River. The rooms have that curious quality of vitality which works of art invariably produce if they have been chosen because of a genuine emotional response to their quality. As the combined wall space of the rooms is quite inadequate to show all of the pictures, we see them, and the sculptures and water-colours as well, stacked in corners, corridors, storerooms, behind sofas, and even on chairs.

It may seem strange that the collection as a whole does not give the impression of extreme modernity when one considers the contemporaneity of the masters represented in it. This should make out a good case for modern French art with the recalcitrant few who still persist in their belief that all such art is only a neurotic form of perversion or charlatanism.

The harmonious effect of the collection is due as much to the uniformity of taste displayed in it as to the quality of its individual pieces.

disfiguring hair growths permanently destroyed! (not merely removed)

The undergrowth must also be removed in order to prevent a bristly regrowth

THERE'S no concealing them these days . . . the unsightly hairs that are so disfiguring. There is but one thing to do . . . destroy the growth entirely.

Applied as easily as cold cream, ZIP gets at the cause . . . the roots . . . and permanently destroys hair growths. So simple; so rapid; and so pleasant to use since special provision has been made in its preparation so as to avoid any semblance of pain or discomfort. It is a favorite with stage and screen stars as well as Beauty Specialists for face, arms, legs, body and underarms.

Harmless—Painless

Do not confuse ZIP with other methods. ZIP attacks the undergrowth and roots . . . and in this way destroys the growth. It is not a depilatory. It is an Epilator. And so effective! So quick and simple. After years of research this safe and painless product was created. Remember, there is no other Epilator.

ZIP leaves no trace of hair above the skin; no prickly stubble later on; no dark shadow under the skin. Each treatment makes the growth weaker until destroyed completely.

A Permanent Method

It is a harmless, fragrant compound and free from sulphides. Moreover, there are no disagreeable fumes, no discoloring of porcelain and tile. ZIP acts immediately and brings lasting results. You will be delighted and you risk nothing, for ZIP is sold on a money-back guarantee basis.

Vogue appeals to its readers

To Protect Vogue's Originality

CONSTANTLY we have to face the problem presented by newspaper publishers, department stores, and advertising art services who use or adapt Vogue cover designs, illustrations, decorations, or other material and offer it to the public as their own without asking our permission. Vogue has brought suit against many of them in the past, and has yet to lose a case.

Some of them have implied that we ought to feel flattered at the compliment to Vogue's originality and distinctiveness. We do not. Vogue's reputation as an originator of ideas is too well established to need the left-handed praise of imitation. The compliment is one we can spare.

Unfortunately, we cannot be everywhere at once. Therefore we are asking our readers to help us detect these flagrant violations of a fundamental and well-understood law. If you observe any Vogue cover design, illustration, decoration, or other material reproduced in any magazine, newspaper, catalogue or other publications, will you help us to maintain the standards of American business honesty by reporting the infringement to us, mentioning the publication, the issue, and the page, and if possible inclosing a clipping of the suspected material?

The copyright law is intended to protect a publisher against the stealing of matter which it has cost him time and money to secure and the exercise of careful judgment to select for publication. Although Vogue does not wish to take legal action or to collect the heavy punitive damages provided, we nevertheless cannot permit the unauthorized use of copyrighted Vogue material in either the advertising or editorial columns of any other publication.

If we have made for you a magazine whose originality you appreciate—if we have been of practical service to you in any way—if you are interested in encouraging business integrity—may we ask your co-operation?

LIVING ON TOP OF THE WORLD

the dirt that is the one great drawback of all penthouse living, artificially lighted from above at night to give it eerie beauty. Here, too, is the chance for a circular entrance-hall with an entire ceiling of glass. Think of having a moving procession of clouds and stars, instead of a static arrangement that closes down above like the lid of a box!

PENTHOUSE ROOMS

Two-storey rooms are possible in any duplex, but they seem especially to belong to the top of the world. I saw one in Sweden that was new and exciting—a circular library, walled all the way round with books. No vertical lines broke the flow of the shelves, because the supports were slender brass affairs that didn't show. This is an ideal room for skylighting—and don't forget that here, as everywhere else in a penthouse, you may have a fireplace. Fireplaces on the floors below are difficult to achieve; often they aren't allowed at all. But penthouse chimneys are so short that even the bath dressing-rooms may have their own wood-fires.

Another feature that surely must be included in the up-to-date penthouse is the room for games and exercises. This, too, may be glass-roofed, at least in part. An inside awning shuts off the sun on warm days; when wanted, it shines down on the polished linoleum floor where shuffleboard, deck tennis and other games are to be played. There is a bar in one corner. One whole wall is of mirror, and, in front of it, washed by the sun and its reflection, the padded silk exercise quilts are thrown down.

Even more interesting, because more unusual, is the tiny room that may be added on the very tiptop roof. An outside stairway leads up to it or an iron spiral, and no bridge on an Atlantic liner is more sacred. A little stateroom, perhaps no more than seven feet by twelve—a bunk—a writing-desk—this, truly, is the "Room of One's Own" that Virginia Woolf prescribes—a room for the hobby that is shared with no one else. At Saint Cloud, Sue et Mare have made such a cell for a modern hermit who craves a desert escape, but that room with its pleasant, intimate view across Paris couldn't be half as withdrawn from the world as one that lives its life between heaven and earth on top of a New York monolith. Such a place should have no telephone extension, but there might be a run for the dog outside.

TERRACES IN THE AIR

In planning what to do with the terraces, so few people seem to consider that the material of the house walls is of the utmost importance. With red brick as a background, you can make a charming Georgian garden—a brick or flag terrace, box borders, a lead fountain, a green-and-white awning, and stick willow furniture. If you happen to like the Directoire sort of thing, you could do it more successfully if you had walls of smooth white stucco. Part of the terrace could be floored with yellow gravel, and iron furniture could be used. Iron urns on pedestals—perhaps even a bust—a dark green or dark blue awning lined with white—how well these would look against stucco and how sad against red brick! Stucco, too, is the ideal background for decoration in the modern manner, so suitable to a site that couldn't have existed in any century but our own.

At the other side of the terrace from the house wall stands the coping, and here is where some disastrous mistakes are made. The law prescribes the height of this safety device, but it doesn't specify that it shall be solid, so as to rule out the very view for which its owner climbed so high. If taken in time, the coping may express itself in terms of iron railing or stone balustrade that stripes the view but doesn't obliterate it or, what is just as important, cut off the breeze. On top of this coping, the architect of the building often plans to put ornaments of some sort, under the impression that they make a pleasant finish when looked at from the street. Considered from the penthouse owner's garden, however, they become mere oversize enormities that dwarf everything around them. Such ideas should be firmly nipped before they flower; if the builder has already bought urns ten feet high, he isn't likely to send them to a charity rummage sale.

Penthouse awnings, it seems to me, are much better when kept simple in line. Orange, lined with white, is gay outside and cool underneath. Red and yellow stripes suit a more or less informal arrangement. Sky-blue bound in purple is a bit impractical, but quite lovely and very feminine. Windbreaks of woven wood fencing are pleasant and add to the garden effect.

THE GARDEN ON HIGH

When it comes to the actual planting, such a delightful part of any penthouse adventure, many people seem to believe that because a shrub grows to a considerable height, its roots must go deep in proportion, but this is not always the case. Rhododendrons, forsythia, and privet need no more than twelve inches depth of soil—a forest of growth from a saucerful of earth. Boxwood, too, is an excellent evergreen shrub for somewhat formal effects, and good results are possible with dwarf Japanese yew. Needless to say, the earth for all of these must be well fertilized and changed every year or two, but the results justify the time. Wistaria is an excellent vine for covering walls that need softening, and it takes to its aerial surroundings as though its ancestors had all been steeplejacks. It needs a stout trellis upon which to climb, for it can not cling to a flat surface as ivy does. Well cared for, and with rather more soil than the shrubs demand, even a small vine will grow amazingly, blossoming the second season after planting and increasing in stature and beauty for an indefinite number of years. Should a climber be sought to mantle a brick or stucco surface where there is no trellis, one could search far and find no equal of the Boston ivy, a generous green drapery that will soon cover every available inch of surface.

But, of course, the bulk of the garden must be made up of smaller plants that the florist places and changes with the season. Be sure, by the way, that there are plenty of outlets for watering, and don't forget that you may have a real live fountain if you want it or the music of water that drips slowly from one shallow basin to the next. A small greenhouse where flowers may be grown indoors all winter is something to be considered, too—and think of the joy of supplementing the table decorations that are bought with those you can pick yourself!

Perhaps, the last touch of luxury is the possession of a private elevator. One of the regular bank will not be set aside for you, no matter how important your penthouse development may be, but, here again, those who buy "in the steel" may sometimes have arrangements made for them. Such a front door, topped by a sky-climbing, rapid-transit hallway, is something that surely anticipates an age beyond our own, and how about our own airplane landing?

any kind, outside of a narrow band, will do. One may wear a small cloche, with a fairly straight brim or a beret, providing it does not depart too far from the authentic Basque shape. Shoes must be sturdy and comfortable, and any attempt to minimize their size or give them a novel touch is a waste of effort, for the real golfer is known by the comfortable, sturdy shoes she wears.

Soft woollens are strongly entrenched in the golfer's tradition, but, when it comes to playing in the summer heat, she chooses the simplest and most tailored dress available—of shantung, tussur, or toile de soie. A loose, warm coat, built on simple sports lines, for the motor trip home, is an indispensable part of her golf tenuë.

With the exigencies of the sport and the unwritten rules of the game, the tennis dress has little latitude for change. It must be washable and white, it must be classically simple, and it must allow perfect freedom for play. Yet, there is a noticeable difference between the tennis dresses of last year and of this, and there are, apparently, unlimited possibilities of developing individual characteristics in a plain white sleeveless tennis dress that reaches, invariably, just below the knee.

By slightly shaping the dress at the waist-line, raising the belt, and giving the skirt a free start from the top of the hip-bone, couturiers have invested the tennis dress with the outstanding features of this year's mode and have distinguished one dress from another by the clever use of incrustations, of opposition of weave—where weave is perceptible—, by variations in the cut of the neck-line, and by their own ways of introducing skirt width. They have had an excellent range of white wash fabrics: toiles de soie, linens, piqués, crêpes de Chine, shantungs, and tussurs.

The majority of tennis players find a hat a nuisance and consider the coloured crêpe de Chine handkerchiefs the best means of keeping their hair in place, binding them firmly around the head. There have been various attempts to play in the canvas espadrilles, but it is generally agreed that light-weight, rubber-soled shoes, firmly laced over the instep, cause less wear and tear on the feet. Traditionally speaking, white stockings, of silk-and-wool or lisle, are the only correct thing; and a loose light-weight woollen coat, preferably in white, or a vivid sweater or jacket, are smart and comfortable to slip into after the game.

BEACH FASHIONS FROM PARIS

lighter, striped, polka-dotted, or in the same colour. Incidentally, this year, trunks are not so wide and full as in past seasons.

In choosing your colours, remember to take into consideration your suntanned skin. Black-and-white, navy-and-white, or white tops with blue or Irish green trunks are unfailingly smart. Sky-blue—beware that it is not turquoise—is excellent if you are young and slim and brown. Garnet-red looks well, but fireman's red is too scorching. Try, also, to avoid the temptations of lavenders, purples, pinks, yellows, or boudoir colours. The low-cut sun-back has not lost any of its popularity, square décolletages are effective, and, occasionally, a backless suit that holds by a strap around the neck is seen on a sun enthusiast. The smartest suit of the season, however, is the hand-knitted sweater-like suit, shown on page 38. Gloriously soft and thick, it is in green with navy-blue bands at the neck-line and waist.

When you lie long lazy hours on the beach or put out to sea under spreading sails, a hardy cotton or linen fabric seems the smartest. Piqué, crash, or the sail-cloth that Brittany fishermen use for their clothes takes first place for pyjamas or overalls—outclassing even tussur and shantung. The dressy type of silk pyjama looks a little theatrical. Shorts with cotton shirts are shown both by Patou and Yrlande, who carefully follow the fashions set by the international set at Venice. Bathing-capes and bathrobes are usually of towelling—and often cut in a great square.

Striped awning-like materials are smart for accessories, for bags, parasols, and even for beach coats. Bags are quite large, this year, so that one may carry a suit, purse, cigarettes, and a book. Wide, floppy hats of linen, with sectional crowns and stitched brims are newer than straw and a little more practical, as they are very flexible. Rubber accessories, such as diving caps, belts, and bathing-shoes are best in white. White espadrilles, white canvas shoes, white knitted cotton belts, white cotton parasols, and white or navy-blue berets are other good accessories. Rubberized fabrics are used only for the bag to carry a wet bathing-suit, never for capes, wraps, or rugs. The latter and the beach cushions are of denim, sail-cloth, awning cloth, or éponge, usually in a neutral tone to harmonize with many different suits and pyjamas.

To Remove Arm or Leg Hair Without Fostering Bristly Re-Growth!

A NEW way of removing arm and leg hair has been found that not only removes every vestige of hair instantly, but banishes the stimulated hair growth thousands of women are charging to less modern ways. A way that not only removes hair but does not foster its reappearance.

It is changing previous conceptions of cosmeticians about hair removing. Women are flocking to its use. The discovery of R. C. Lawry, noted beauty scientist, it is different from any other hair remover known.

WHAT IT IS

It is a fine toilet creme, resembling a superior beauty clay in texture. You simply spread it on where hair is to be removed. Then rinse off with water.

That is all. Every vestige of hair is gone; so completely that even by running your hand across the skin not the slightest trace of stubble can be felt. And—the reappearance of that hair is delayed surprisingly.

When re-growth finally does come, it is utterly unlike the re-growth following old ways. You can feel the difference.

The skin is left soft as a child's. No skin roughness, no enlarged pores. You feel freer than probably ever before in your life of annoying hair growth.

WHERE TO OBTAIN

It is called NEET—a preparation long on the market, but recently changed in compounding to embody the new Lawry discovery.

It is on sale at practically all drug and department stores and in beauty parlors. In both $1 and 60c sizes. The $1 size contains 3 times the quantity of the 60c size.

A New Discovery That Not Only Removes Hair Instantly But Delays Its Reappearance Remarkably

By a total lack of stubble you can feel the difference between this and old ways.

Not only is slightest fear of coarsened re-growth banished but actual reappearance of hair is slowed amazingly

Telephoning within the Home...as well as to the Outside...is often Desirable

Homes where household routine moves smoothly and without apparent effort are charming to live in and to visit. Quite often their direction is carried on by means of intercommunicating Bell telephones, which link together the different parts of the residence and grounds. Only one telephone system is necessary—for all calls, both inside and outside, can be made from the same instruments.

An early-morning jaunt across the countryside, and your favorite saddle-horse brought to the door in a few minutes, because there is a telephone in the stables for quick communication.

Last-minute instructions to the seamstress . . . or something important to tell her while you are far away from home. Surely, the telephone is an important adjunct of the sewing-room.

You can talk from one part of your home to another over the same Bell telephones which carry your voice to neighbors . . . to other cities . . . even to other countries

It is so convenient to be in instant touch with every part of the household . . . to telephone dinner instructions to the cook . . . summon your horse or motor . . . talk with various members of the family wherever they may be.

A new dial telephone intercommunicating system has recently been perfected by Bell engineers, designed to serve up to fifteen extension telephones. No operator is required. Calls from the outside may be answered at any telephone, and transferred to any other. There is absolute privacy on all calls, both inside and outside. The instrument principally used is a specially designed hand-set telephone, compact and smart in appearance. An additional outside line is often provided for servants' use.

Your local Bell Company has intercommunicating systems of all kinds, for use with any number of telephones from two upward. All Bell intercommunicating systems are installed and maintained by the company, thus assuring a maximum of satisfactory and uninterrupted service.

Your local Business Office will gladly tell you about this dial system or other intercommunicating plans suited to your home.

THIS IS THE OPEN SEASON FOR TOWELS

these are the catch of the season

EQUIPPED for effect and equipped for action—some girls know how to be vigorous gracefully . . . can spend a good hour wrestling with the water as well as resting on the sand, and still keep their charm . . . like to do things. So do some towels. * The liveliness of the latest Cannon towels goes all the way through—and goes on forever, almost. They are fair but not frail. Even the softest Cannon colors and fluffiest fabrics are designed for duty, for that first and foremost. Their cotton is a longer, finer fiber. Their weave is close, precise and firm. So their original beauty lasts and their fresh new feel remains. * This year the most thrilling towels of all are really thrifty as well. All-over shades of peach, jade, maize, orchid, rose and turquoise in bold, dashing, chic designs are yours at nearly invisible prices. * Stop today at the Cannon counter of your usual store or shop for your share of color and charm and towel comfort. When you get to the shore or the mountains, you'll be glad you came so elegantly equipped. Any towel you meet that wears the Cannon label is a good buy any time. And this is the open season for towels—these are the catch of the season. . . . Cannon Mills, Inc., 70 Worth St., New York City. Makers of CANNON LAVENLAWN, the world's finest sheet—using long-staple Egyptian cotton.

TO TEST ENDURANCE

A great hotel made its own careful towel tests before buying. Typical towels of all the well-known brands were sewed together into a great sheet and laundered a hundred times. Cannon towels showed far less wear than any of the others. On the basis of this strenuous test and on the basis of evident quality—this hotel now uses Cannon towels exclusively. So do the great majority of all hotels, clubs, hospitals, railroads and steamship lines. So do most homes.

THESE ARE THE CANNON TOWELS that captivated Fifth Avenue. They come in all-over colors and modernized designs—with wash cloths and bath mats to match. They have two right sides, two bright sides—both equally decorative. New colors are maize, jade, orchid, peach, rose, turquoise—guaranteed fast. Typical Cannon values—75c and more for the bath towels—at your own store or shop. (Cannon towels may be had in other styles, to suit any taste, at prices from 25c to $2.50.)
